Redevelopment: a help or a hindrance?

Is government promoting growth . . .

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

Redevelopment: Is it a boon? Or a boondoggle?

Is it government promoting growth using a prudent, legal process? Or is it government meddling in the market place, disturbing the private enterprise system that, if left alone, would achieve better results?

Pomona's policy makers and residents are grappling with those questions, and a hundred others, as the city moves toward the possible creation of industrial, commercial and residential redevelopment zones.

And the answers to those questions are not easy or simple, mainly because redevelopment is a complex and complicated process that can and has been abused in some cities. But it can also be highly successful.

Where will it work? And under what conditions?

Any answer to those questions, even the answers of experts in the field, will be subjective based on each individual's analysis of the business climate and economic conditions existing at the time redevelopment is proposed.

Perhaps the best place to start in examining the merits of redevelopment is to consider the fundamental logic — the basic theory — of the process.

That basic theory, most experts agree, is this: redevelopment can make certain "problematic" land competitive in the market place by eliminating negative conditions or creating positive ones. The result, hopefully, is that development occurs and thereby expands the community's tax base, creates employment, generates new activity and provides all the other benefits associated with growth.

Take a hypothetical example: suppose fictitious ABC Merchandise Co. is looking for a good industrial site in the area between Los Angeles and San Bernardino-Riverside on which to build a large warehouse.

See related stories on page 13

The company would probably want a location with a railroad spur, good streets and easy access to a freeway.

Sites meeting those requirements can be found many places.

The location the company will select will be determined on a purely dollars-and-cents basis. The company will select the site that meets its needs at the best total development cost.

Points the company will consider will include land cost, necessary site improvements (are storm drains needed? street lights etc.), taxes, local restrictions, and expansion potential.

Arms cache grows and grows

May be largest ever in U.S.; suspect linked to extremists

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Police investigators believe the seizure of over eight tons of illegal explosives and weapons found on the property of Ontario resident Donald G. Wiggins may be the largest such find in U.S. history-but the search is far from over.

Wiggins, who was arrested early Friday morning after leading Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies and Ontario policeman to hidden caches of dangerous explosives and military weapons at his home and Pomona business, appears to have been associated with extreme right-wing hate groups, a paramilitary organization, and flying-saucer and earthquake cults.

Sheriff Peter Pitchess told newmen Friday that the weapons discovered were enough "to equip a 200 man company of military personnel."

Since that time, however, a number of other weapons have been discovered.

Ontario police spokesman, Lt. Ray Rump, told newsmen late Saturday afternoon that the department had just begun to log weapons discovered at Wiggins' small Ontario home the previous night.

"We continued to search all day Saturday, but didn't come up with anything else," Rump said. "Now it's just a matter of adding it all up and seeing what we've got."

So far, investigators have found hundreds of metal containers filled with weapons and explosives-automatic machine-guns, anti-aircraft weapons, plastic explosives, hand-grenades and others commonly used by military personnel-on property owned by Wiggins.

In addition, San Bernardino sheriff's deputies reported the discovery Saturday afternoon of a new cache of

Tell of scheme to cover up defective Alaska pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radiographers for the nearly completed trans-Alaska pipeline have told a House subcommittee that they took part in a scheme to falsify up to 200 X rays of defective double-joint welds.

The falsification took place after the 200 pipes with defective welds were strung along the 800-mile pipeline without repairs, the staff of the House energy and power subcommittee charged.

Finding the defective welds and correcting them could cost "hundreds of millions of dollars" and delay the pipeline's opening, now set for mid-1977, the subcommittee staff warned.

The staff charged that the Departments of Interior and Transportation may have conspired with Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium that is constructing the pipeline, "to cover up or at the very least actively ignore another serious welding problem on the pipeline."

A spokesman for Alyeska told the Anchorage Daily News that the pipeline company was unaware of any falsification of double-weld joint X rays. "We categorically deny a conspiracy with anyone," he said.

The X rays of the 200 doublejoint welds were taken in sample audits of some 42,000 double-joint welds made by machines at Fairbanks and Valdez, the subcommittee staff said. It is possible that more X rays were falsified, three unidentified radiographers testified.

Alyeska is just completing repairs on 4,000 manual welds that were defective or lacked the required X rays. That problem was uncovered in 1975.

The staff's charges were made in a memo to subcommittee chairman Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. The staff recommended that the subcommittee consider asking the Justice Department to investigate whether there was a conspiracy to ignore the defective doublejoint welds.

It also recommended that the Transportation Department and Alyeska audit all the doublejoint X rays.

Although the staff released copies of its memo Saturday, it refused to identify the radiographers.

Four killed in blaze, one a baby being born

CUMBERLAND, Ky. (AP) — Four persons were killed in the fire — including one born as flames raced through the four-room house.

It was cold in the eastern Kentucky mountains, and the family of Estil Shepherd Sr. had huddled in a back bedroom of the house to receive the full effect of the heat from the coal stove.

Suddenly, the house was in flames.

In seconds, Shepherd, 22, his wife Debbie, 17, their 2-year-old son Estil Jr., and a child who was to be named Calloway — born as the inferno raged — were all dead.

"A passerby noticed it was burning," Cumberland Fire Chief Joe Carruba said of the Shepherd home. "And it had already got to them because they didn't hear any noises or anything up there. The house was on a hillside and we had to use 1,000 feet of hose to reach a hydrant."

"She was pretty close to the window," Carruba said of Mrs. Shepherd. "I think they might have been overcome by smoke before the flames reached them."

Carruba said Cumberland patrolman Michael Madrey "reached in there and got ahold of her arm, but she was already dead. He could tell she was dead just before the flames drove him back.

"She had been expecting anytime and I imagine the excitement and all that ... in my opinion she got sick ... she was close to the window and under those conditions she might not have been able to get out," Carruba added.

'So, what do I do now?'--Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — His own retirement imminent, President Ford has been asking questions about how his predecessors, from Dwight D. Eisenhower to Richard M. Nixon, organized their days after the White House.

In some cases, particularly that of Lyndon B. Johnson, the President was curious about the projects the former presidents interested themselves in, "what they focused on" after leaving office. In Nixon's case, Ford's interest apparently was confined to logistical questions such as the staff, office equipment, communications he needed in retirement.

Ford's inquiries are being handled by his military aide, Maj. Robert Barrett, who has pursued them by personal visits, reading and phone calls to aides of former presidents. Barrett said that he visited San Clemente, Calif., late in November but did not see or ask to see the nation's only living ex-president. He talked with Jack Brennan, Nixon's aide.

Has the 38th President talked personally with the 37th President about life after the White House? "I don't know," Barrett said. "Probably not."

Ford himself has yet to announce his retirement plans. From another White House source (not Barrett), it was learned he has received offers to head or teach at a university, to join law firms, to become board chairman of a private company or a foundation — "all at an exalted salary."

Ford dispatched his military aide to Texas Nov. 28 for a long talk with Tom Johnson, publisher of the Dallas Times Herald, who was executive assistant to Lyndon Johnson in his retirement. Additionally, Ford himself talked about 15 minutes with the publisher Thursday morning.

"The President sounded in very good spirits," Johnson said.

"... He did mention there had been several offers of boards, both public and private, and that he would be looking at those more seriously after he left office."

Tom Johnson told Ford that the late president had five major projects in retirement — his memoirs, a series of television interviews, the Johnson Library, the Johnson School of Public Affairs and to help Lady Bird Johnson with her book of reminiscences. President Johnson completed those projects before his death on Jan. 22, 1973.

The publisher said Maj. Barrett came to see him to get a "perspective on the problems a president can expect to confront in retirement, to review the kinds of things President and Mrs. Johnson had to handle, how they set up a staff, how they handled the mail."

The publisher told Barrett that the former president received 80,000 letters in his first year out of office and as many as 500 phone calls a week in the early weeks of his retirement. Both the calls and the mail fell in volume later, the mail down to about 100 a week before his death. In his first six months out of the Oval Office, Lyndon Johnson had a staff of 26. Later, it was reduced to eight.

Ford also had available to him retirement information on Eisenhower, the size and scope of his staff at Gettysburg College, the range of his out-of-office activity, from his memoirs to the occasions his successors in the Oval Office sought his counsel.

Meanwhile, President Ford, as he probes his future possibilities, seems to have emerged from his grim post-election mood. He has begun giving interviews again, he is dancing again at White House parties, he is looking forward to his ski vacation in Vail, Colo., beginning Dec. 19. While there, Mrs. Ford said, he will also spend some time considering his job offers.

At a news conference Thursday, after a meeting to discuss politics with Ronald Reagan, John B. Connally and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, the President was asked by a reporter if he planned to run again in 1980.

"Do you want me to?" he asked. And Gerald R. Ford laughed.

Weapons cache grows illegal weapons that had been hurriedly dumped in a remote area of Wrightwood.

Deputies described the material as "enough to fill a small pickup truck." There was no indication however whether the Wrightwood find was related to the others in Lancaster, Ontario and Pomona, however.

Sheriff Peter Pitchess had speculated to newsmen Friday that the arms were to be used by a group of "insane revolutionaries" to possibly attempt to overthrow the government.

Indications are that Wiggins indeed did have associations with ultra-right-wing hate groups, Pitchess revealed. Large amounts of "extremely" anti-communist, anti-black, and anti-semitic literature were discovered at his home along with a printing press that had apparently been used to print the pamphlets.

In addition, there were voluminous amounts of material dealing with earthquakes on the property. Arthur Methe Jr., who lives at the house where most of the explosives and weapons were found, has revealed Wiggins showed an avid interest in earthquakes and that he had associated with others who had similar interests.

"Don can predict earthquakes," Methe declared. "He predicted eighteen of them all over the world this year. The only place he can't tell is in Russia. No one knows what happens there."

Wiggins kept extensive maps of eartquake faults and had an elaborate system of predicting them, Methe revealed, but when asked to describe the system, he declined.

In addition, it was learned that Wiggins also associated with flying saucer followers and had attended a number of meetings of a group in Riverside.

He had met Jeff Martin, who is now being sought by police in connection with the armaments, at one of these meetings in Riverside.

Methe, who has claimed Martin is the owner of all of the weapons discovered, says that Martin was deeply involved and concerned over flying saucers.

"That guy (Martin) was hooked on flying saucers," Methe said. "I don't know if he thought we were going to be invaded or anything, but he must have been scared of them."

Investigators have as yet been unable to locate the mysterious Martin. He was apparently the man that gave Wiggins a $17,000 loan to finance his Pomona foundry business. The money was paid in $20 bills.

Wiggins, his mother and brother all claim Martin had asked to store the cannisters of weapons and explosives on their property and that none of them were aware what was in them until recently.

"Don was walking around the yard the other day when he accidentally kicked one of them (cannisters) over," said his mother, Edna Methe. "He got scared and buried the ones that weren't already buried.

"When we started hearing about our Lancaster property on the news, Don got real scared and finally went to the police to tell them about all this other stuff.

"Don is a good boy," she said. "Sure he thinks things are wrong with the government, but he's no extremist."

Talks may break Rhodesia impasse

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger met with British leaders and Zambian officials Saturday to discuss the impasse at the Geneva talks on black rule for the breakaway British colony of Rhodesia.

Sources close to the talks said a potential solution was forming around a direct British role in a transition government — including possible control of the justice and defense ministries.

Britain would provide a resident chief of state and perhaps a minister to hold the justice and defense portfolios, but there would be no military commitment, they said.

Kissinger's own five-point plan, rejected by black nationalists who said they did not want a settlement imposed from outside, called for white Rhodesians to retain the two key ministeries.

Rhodesia's white minority government declared independence from Britain in 1965, but London rejected the move as illegal.

Kissinger met with his British counterpart, Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland. The two later attended a soccer game on Kissinger's last official visit to Europe before stepping down when the administration of President-elect Jimmy Carter takes office Jan. 20.

Kissinger, who is to leave for home Sunday, then met for an hour with Zambian officials who brought a message from their president, Kenneth Kaunda.

"On the basis of this message, we believe that prospects exist for progress in the Geneva negotiations on Rhodesia," said a Kissinger spokesman.

Chino adopts new housing tax

The City of Chino is going to make some more money on all those new homes being built in the city.

City councilmen have adopted a new housing tax on residential construction, additions to existing units and trailer spaces.

Developers will pay 15 cents per square foot for each new dwelling unit, or $200 per unit, depending on which cost is greater.

The same tax will be applied to additions or remodelings of existing dwelling units if they are 650 square feet or larger. Trailer spaces would be assessed at the rate of $200 per unit.

Officials said the tax would be paid when building permits are issued. It is expected that developers would pass the cost on to home buyers in the price of new units.

City spokesmen indicated that since additional city services are needed when new residents move in, they should participate in those costs.

No one spoke for or against the new tax at a public hearing conducted by the City Council.

In other business, the council has approved the much-discussed general plan amendment for the north Chino area, covering about 2,100 acres. The area is bounded by the Los Angeles County line, Benson Avenue, Phillips Avenue and the northerly city limits.

The amendment will reduce the potential number of dwelling units in the area from 9,690 to 5,100. It has already been adopted by the San Bernardino County supervisors.

Main concern of area residents was to preserve the rural atmosphere of their region.

Councilmen have also approved an application by Albert Lezama to operate a taxicab company in the city. Only one other firm, Paul's Yellow Cab, currently operates in Chino, but does not have an exclusive franchise, said officials. The council may authorize as many permits to operate cab companies as it wants, according to City Atty. Jimmy Gutierrez.

Gene Stallians of Paul's Yellow Cab opposed the Lezama request on the basis of "unwarranted competition." The new company's operation would hurt his firm financially, claimed Stallians.

Carter nearing final decisions

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Carter spent a rainy Saturday at home, talking to advisers on the telephone and nearing final decisions on possible nominees for key defense and economic positions, an aide reported.

Carter plans to go to Atlanta Sunday afternoon to continue his personal talent hunt and to talk with 12 representatives of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

An announcement of at least one Cabinet nomination is expected by the middle of the week.

Husband faces murder charge in 4-year-old drowning of woman

Upland police will seek formal murder charges against a local man whose wife was drowned in a bathrub in the couple's apartment four years ago.

Police said Saturday that Charles Louis Sihler, 40, of 1594 N. San Antonio Ave., Upland, has been booked into West End Sheriff's jail and that a complaint will be sought through the district attorney's office.

Detectives re-opened the case about two weeks ago after receiving new information concerning the drowning of Sihler's 33-year-old wife Roberta Lee.

Mrs. Sihler drowned Dec. 11, 1972, while she reportedly was in the bathtub of the couple's apartment at 1020-D Springfield St., Upland.

Sihler told police that he found his wife's body face down in water in the tub.

Mrs. Sihler was pronounced dead at San Antonio Community Hospital shortly afterward.

Yule 'activities' slated

"The Celebration of Christmas" is the general theme of holiday activities on the Euclid Avenue parkway in Ontario.

The Ontario Downtown Merchants Association and the Ontario Recreation Department are sponsoring the festivities which will include nightly caroling and a presentation of Los Posadas.

Vina Danks Junior High School Chorus, directed by Cynthia Soukesian, will begin the celebration Monday night at 7:30 with carols in the parkway between B and G streets. The Upland High School Girls Chorus and Upland High's Boys Chorus, directed by Carl Walters, will also be featured on Monday.

The Tuesday evening program will have Serrano Junior High School Chorus of Montclair, directed by Bob Lucier, and the Upland Junior High School Chorus, directed by Mary Hess. The A Cappella and Vocal Ensemble of Upland High and the Ontario Imperial Junior High School Chorus will be on Wednesday's program.

Los Posada, the traditional portrayal of the people and events preceeding and following the birth of Jesus Christ in the manger at Bethlehem, will begin at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Gus Ramos will coordinate the nine-day presentation by Our Lady of Guadalupe Church of Ontario and Chino through Dec. 23.

Matt Schully and Jeannette Harris will director the Chaffey High School Chorus in carols Thursday night. On Dec. 20, the Trinity United Methodist Church of Ontario will present its chorus directed by Ruth Wheeler.

The respective programs for Dec. 21 and Dec. 22 will feature the First Baptist Church of Upland Youth Chorus, directed by Danny Martinez, and the First Baptist Church of Ontario Youth Chorus.

Among those assisting in the planning of the special holiday presentations are Marla Cobb of the Ontario Recreation Department, Proyecto de Accion Social (PAS), members of the parks and other city departments, the Ontario Chamber of Commerce and several residents of the MexicanAmerican community.

Concert set by Ganesha

The music department at Ganesha High School in Pomona will present its winter concert Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the campus Giants Lair.

Performing will be the Ganesha Concert Choir, Ganesha Singers, Madrigal Singers, Studio Band and Concert Band.

Christmas music will be included in the program.

Admission is free.

Redevelopment—

All those points will vary from location to location and many thousands of dollars will be saved or lost depending on which site is selected.

Now further suppose that the company comes down to a choice between a Pomona site on Reservoir Street near the Pomona Freeway, and a site east of Ontario near the San Bernardino Freeway.

All other factors being equal, taxes alone might tip the scales in favor of the Ontario location. If the Pomona site was further complicated by the fact that three or four individual parties owned the property and a drainage problem existed, the choice would be clear.

That is where Pomona officials feel the redevelopment process could enter the picture and make the Pomona property competitive.

Through redevelopment the city could, conceivably, step in and acquire the property from the separate, multiple owners — which would eliminate the company's expense of contacting and bargaining with each separate party, one or more of whom might be an absentee landowner or reluctant to sell the property for some reason.

Having acquired the land, the city might resell the land to the company at no profit and make public improvements to the property at no charge, such as constructing a storm drain — if the company commits itself to building the warehouse in Pomona.

If those two actions by the city save the company $200,000, for example, it might make the difference between the company selecting Pomona and some other location.

Assuming all that happens, redevelopment would have served its purpose — making a local site competitive for development by removing some negative factors (in this case multiple ownership and drainage problems).

For its hypothetical $200,000 investment, Pomona would get a new industrial facility that would have been in another community. Once the city's costs are recovered through the system of "tax increment" revenues, the new property taxes generated by the facility should help ease the owner.

Critics of redevelopment, and they are many, are inclined to argue that what the city really gets for its $200,000 is nothing — that development of the land would have occurred anyway at some point in time.

If that argument is true, then redevelopment becomes nothing but a subsidy for the developer — a governmental giveaway profiting the rich.

But is the assumption, that development will occur anyway, true?

"Basically, the assumption is fallacious," says Manny DeDios, redevelopment consultant to Pomona's City Council and Redevelopment Commission.

"If a developer can buy and assemble land, build and make a profit then development will happen. (But) in the three areas being studied in Pomona development is not occurring despite tangible evidence of interest by developers," he continued.

In each of the three areas, he explained, there are conditions that prevent Pomona from being competitive in the final analysis by developers.

Some of those negative conditions are:

—In the proposed Reservoir Street project area there are mixed industrial-residential uses combined with mixed ownership; sites that have to be cleared of old structures before development could occur; lack of fully improved streets in some areas; and areas in need of special improvements, such as drainage systems.

—In the proposed Holt Avenue-Indian Hill Boulevard district the basic problem is the depth of commercial property along Holt Avenue, which backs up to residential property in many cases. Officials say some businesses, especially car dealers, may need room to grow but are stymied because of the unwillingness of residential property owners to sell at a reasonable price. The fear is that such businesses might be lured away from the city to other locations, such as Montclair, where large vacant areas are still available.

—In the case of the proposed Mountain Meadows project area the basic problem is the hilly terrain and multiple ownership of the land. City officials are convinced that if the city puts together the land package and builds the residential streets, the property can be resold to a developer for construction of 50 or more "executive" homes in the $70,000-and-up price range.

It all sounds rosy, of course, but Pomona has smelled the roses of redevelopment before and never enjoyed the success envisioned by promoters.

Pomona already has two redevelopment project areas, and has had them for years. They are located downtown on both sides of Garey Avenue. The Pomona Mall, as can be seen at a glance, has not grown or flourished under redevelopment.

So what is different now? Why should redevelopment for other areas of Pomona fair any better than the Pomona Mall?

"I wasn't associated with those project areas when they were created. I don't know what they did or tried to do," said DeDios.

"But I do know you can't work miracles with redevelopment if there is no demand for the type of property you have available. That's one of the mistakes that often happens with redevelopment," he continued.

A study made two years ago, in which DeDios participated, found that the downtown mall presented difficulties the redevelopment process can't remedy — such poor freeway access compared to other retail shopping areas.

The study concluded the city must not devote its energies seeking a miracle cure for the ailing downtown shopping area. The study suggested that the city start seeking development of other areas to offset the deterioration of the once strong central core.

DeDios does not believe, however, that redevelopment has to be written-off as a lost cause downtown, only that the time is not right for redevelopment now. At some point in the future it may be feasible.

The time is right for the other areas in Pomona, said DeDios.

"If the city takes the attitude of doing nothing, then deterioration of the city's economy will continue. If the city doesn't continue to develop its tax base, in the long run it loses," he said.

In the case of the proposed Mountain Meadows and Reservoir Street districts, said DeDios, the time is right because expensive housing is in demand, as are good, improved industrial locations.

In the case of the proposed Holt Avenue district, DeDios thinks the city must act, through redevelopment, to prevent any deterioration of Pomona's most productive business sector.

"Redevelopment is really an investment in the future. You don't get any immediate new property tax revenues. But without those added revenues in the future, the public services-tax revenue squeeze will only accelerate," he said.

"Used wisely with developers who have good track records of development other places, it can work in Pomona," said DeDios.

More fire power for army urged

LIVERMORE (AP) — The United States needs to improve its tactical nuclear weapons to increase the fire power of land armies and to prepare the country for the changing nuclear weapons picture, says H-bomb developer Edward Teller.

"Nuclear weapons are not absolute," Teller wrote in the current newsletter of the University of California's Lawrence Livermore Laboratory. "We need tactical weapons that complement other tactical systems and provide greater overall fire power for a land army, for example."

Teller, a retired UC physics professor, noted that India and perhaps other countries have or will have nuclear capability, and he said that the nonproliferation treaty signed by the U.S. and the Soviet Union "is becoming shakier and shakier."

When many countries have nuclear weapons, Teller says, the U.S. must be prepared with weapons "of the right properties, quantities and availability.

"This will require innovation," he added.

Teller is now attached to the Hoover Institution of War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University.

Obituaries

Ruth deMontmorency

Ruth Naomi deMontmorency of 11826 Yorba Ave., Chino, died Friday at the Kaiser Hospital in Fontana of natural causes.

Mrs. deMontmorency was born Oct. 27, 1920 in Trenton, Mo.

She is survived by her husband, Louis; two daughters, Jean Woodard of Chino and Judy Mishler of Florida; a sister, Mary Lindsey of Arizona; and four grandchildren.

Services will be held Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. at the Crestlawn Mortuary Chapel in Riverside. The Rev. W. Stanley Creighton will officiate.

Burial will be in the Crestlawn Cemetery in Riverside.

Ernest Heuck

Ernest C. Heuck of 786 California Drive, Claremont, died Friday evening in the Pomona Valley Com-Community Hospital.

Mr. Heuck was born March 2, 1881 in Neumullen, Germany. He came to the United States with his parents when he was three years old. They settled in Davenport, Iowa.

He was with the U.S. Postal Service 20 years most of that time as a railway mail clerk.

Later he worked as a salesman with the Guardian Life Insurance Co. for 31 years. He married Myrtle J. Rueffel Aug. 2, 1905 and a few months after they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1955 they moved to California.

They lived in Ontario before moving to Claremont in 1961.

Mr. Heuck was a member of the Claremont United Church of Christ Congregational and the Claremont Lawn Bowling Association.

Surviving are a son, Ernest A. of Claremont; a granddaughter, Susan Zettle of Claremont; and two grandsons, David E. of Miles City, Mont., and Robert M. of Spain.

Services will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Kingman Chapel in Claremont. The Rev. David M. Held and the Rev. Francis C. Ellis will officiate.

Private entombment will be in Pomona Mausoleum. Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona is in charge of arrangements.

Friends may make memorial contributions to their favorite charities.

Ada Leeper

Ada P. Leeper of Banning, a former Pomona resident, died Friday morning in a Banning convalescent hospital.

Miss Leeper was born July 10, 1889 in Rossville, Kan. She lived in Pomona from 1942 to 1946. She had lived in Banning the past 20 years.

Surviving are three cousins, Mrs. Mildred Steele of Lancaster, Miss Bessie Leeper and Mrs. Belle Hoquist, both of Banning.

Services will be held Monday at 11:30 a.m. in Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona. Dr. John W. Black of the Trinity United Methodist Church of Pomona will officiate.

Services will conclude in the chapel.

Blanche Price

Blanche Ann Price of Pomona died Friday morning at a local convalescent hospital following a long illness.

Mrs. Price came to California in 1955 from Pennsylvania and lived in Pomona a few years before moving to Yucaipa. She lived in Yucaipa a short time and returned to Pomona in 1967.

Surviving are two nephews, Walter W. Klopfenstine of Santa Barbara and Roger A. Klopfenstine of Camarillo, and a niece, Mrs. Kay Binckes of Nipomo.

Private services will be held with Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona in charge of arrangements.

Mission school wins ribbon

Montclair Plaza has awarded the "Judges Favorite Ribbon" to Mission Elementary School, Ontario. Students at the school participated in the annual Christmas tree decorating contest at the plaza. The theme of this year's contest "The Next 100 Years," was interpreted by Mission students as a time of peace.

Students with some help from parents and teachers, decorated dolls of various nations to hang on the winning tree.

According to Sylvia Whitlock, teacher at the school, students were pleased that their idea of peace for all mankind was selected as a winner.

University Club speaker

John H. Chandler president of Scripps College, will address the University Club of Claremont luncheon meeting Tuesday noon at Griswold's.

His subject will be "A Administration." Chandler, the fourth presi-Chandler, the fourth president of Scripps since its founding 55 years ago, is in his second leadership role at a single-sex institution having served as head of Salem College and Academy in Winston-Salem, N.C., from 1971 to 1976.

A native Californian, he is a former vice president of the Danforth Foundation in St. Louis and has served on the faculty of Ohio University and Dartmouth College.

Serrano Christmas program

Serrano Junior High School's musical Christmas program will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The program will feature seasonal numbers presented by the band, orchestra, glee club, choral groups, and dramatic skit portrayals.

Serrano students will also present a program for the citizens of Ontario on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on Euclid Avenue between B and C streets and for the community of Montclair on Wednesday at 11 a.m. in the Montclair Plaza.

Library to close

Ontario City Library spokesman Waynn Pearson said the library will be closed to the public on Thursday and Friday for an inventory of library holdings which will be conducted by the library staff.

Following the inventory, the library will be open for business as usual on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The library is also open to the public on Sundays from noon to 6 p.m.

Student Art Show

Students of Del Paso High School, Walnut, will be holding their annual art show and sale at the Diamond Bar Plaza in front of the Alpha Beta store on Dec. 17.

From noon until 4 p.m. they will have their work on display. Students will demonstrate skills learned in leather craft.

They will take orders for custom-made belts, wrist bands, and key-rings. Other art work on display will include candles and bread art.

Santa to host party

Santa will host a Christmas party at the Pomona Valley YMCA on Dec. 22. There will be games, songs, stories, and goodies. Children need to have one can of food and 25 cents or 50 cents to get in.

Santa's party will be from 1:30 p.m. till 3:30 p.m.

Helicopter bringing Santa

Santa will pay a visit to the Lincoln Development Center, at 440 N. Allyn Ave., Ontario, not by sleigh but by helicopter.

A National Guard helicopter will deliver Santa at Lincoln Center on Thursday at 10 a.m.

According to Principal Mary Jo Sweeney, students from five other locations have been invited to attend the party. They will come from the Linda Vista Trainable Mentally Retarded School; Chaffey Training Center; Cypress Orthopedic Unit; Bernt School; and East Avenue School.

She estimates that several hundred children will be there to welcome Santa when he arrives with his bag of gifts.

'Y' Christmas fun

The Pomona Valley YMCA will be having a Christmas Fun Club for boys and girls 5 to 12 years of age, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Session one will be held Dec. 20 to the 23.

Session two will be held Dec. 27 to the 30.

The cost is $12.50 to members and $15.50 to non-members per session. A special rate is offered those who sign up for both sessions. The cost is $22.50 for members and $27.50 for non-members.

Extended care is offered from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. The cost is an additional $5 per session.

De Anza Christmas music

Music students at De Anza Junior High School in Ontario will present a program of Christmas music during December for residents of several convalescent hospitals in Ontario and Upland.

The next performance will be Thursday at Sweet's Guest Home, 1524 S. Euclid Ave., Ontario.

Students will perform at 1 p.m.

The group has already performed at Bella Vista Convalescent Hospital in Ontario, Upland Convalescent Hospital, Shea Convalescent Hospital in Upland and the Ontario Nursing Home.

More than 60 De Anza students are in beginning and advanced chorus, with 18 students participating in the string orchestra. The orchestra is under the direction of Ric Curry and the chorus is directed by Marian Aglio. Both groups will be performing at the convalescent hospitals.

Crafts classes to begin

A crafts demonstration in the making of holiday ornaments will be offered Tuesday at the Pomona Public Library.

The 7:30 p.m. crafts session will be led by David Streeter. A crafts session for children will be held at the same hour.

Family films will be offered by the library on Wednesday and Thursday at 7 p.m.

Children's events at the library this week include a bedtime story for preschoolers Monday at 7:30, plus events for preschoolers on Tuesday and Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. The Tuesday program will include the films "Silent Night, Holy Night" and "Pluto's Christmas Tree."

Other children's programs are "Kid Power" Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. and T.V. Club Tuesday and Thursday from 5 to 7 p.m.

For information about library programs, persons may call 620-2017.

Pension changes sought

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Los Angeles County officials have been directed by the Board of Supervisors to meet with union leaders on a proposal to drastically cut back pension benefits for future county workers.

The supervisors said they want a report in three weeks on the reaction of the unions to the changes.

The unions have been taking the position that pension allowances can be reduced only through negotations. But Harry Hufford, chief administrative officer of the county, claims its not a negotiable matter since it involves persons who haven't yet been hired.

Tuesday Taylor is a doll...

...but not living, breathing kind

EDITOR'S NOTE: Millions of dollars are spent on research to decide what sort of dolls little girls want. From that research some ingenious dolls have emerged for Christmas seasons, past and present.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tuesday Taylor is originally from the Midwest, although she now lives in a penthouse in New York City. She is a college graduate, plays backgammon and tennis and dabbles in oil painting as a hobby.

Her father probably was some kind of a store owner back in the Midwest, but Tuesday, at 21, has made it big as a writer for an advertising firm. She and her boyfriend, Erik, like to take exotic vacations.

Tuesday is a doll about 14 inches long, the size of the Barbie doll, and her elaborate personality was dreamed up by the Ideal Toy Company's research and development department, which created Tuesday.

"I tried to get her as defined as possible first," says I. Arthur Albert of Ideal. "She is what every young girl can aspire to."

Albert holds that Tuesday is the fashion doll of the '70s, featuring bigger feet, more calf muscle and a lower bustline than the best-selling Barbie. (Over 200 million Barbie dolls have been sold since she came out 18 years ago.) At least that's what the research and development department's studies conclude.

On the other hand, all dolls are not so scientifically planned to capture the market. Even within Ideal. Their "Wake Up Thumbelina" was the brainchild of the president of the New York company, Lionel Weintraub.

Weintraub was watching his new grandchild try to roll over one day. He watched the little one struggle from tummy to back and thought, "What a natural movement."

And with that scientific research behind him, he ordered the engineers in charge of batteries and doll movements to create such a doll. And little Thumbelina is in the stores now, awaiting the Christmas shoppers.

Albert said there was some opposition to the development of Tuesday because of New York City's image.

"New York was under fire at the time. It was pictured as a cesspool and some people wondered if people outside of New York would buy a doll so closely related to New York City."

The creation of a doll in an industry that has retail sales of more than $450 million annually in this country can take years and a great deal of money. The big toy companies employ idea men and women. They research the sales possibilities, interview mothers and children and consider how effectively they can huckster a doll on those Saturday morning TV commercials.

"We spend $1 million or more in research and development," says Joel Rubenstein, a spokesman for Mattel, a big toy producer in California. "A major doll doesn't happen overnight. They are usually several years in development. They are usually team efforts. We talk with parents, we talk with children, we create a prototype, maybe even a demo film to find out how it would come across on TV."

"It's usually very scientific," says Rubenstein.

"But then you might get down to something like what color should the doll's outfit be and it might go this way: 'I don't know, Charlie. What do you like? I like blue. Okay.'"

As times change, so do the dolls. The "anatomically correct" baby boy doll was hazardous a few years back, but now everybody's got one on the market. The doll had been popular in Europe for years, but was considered a bit much for America's Puritan ethic.

Once it hit the stores, however, it became a best seller.

A step further is the "Baby Alive" doll made by Kenner in Cincinnati. "Baby Alive" eats, drinks and dirties her diapers with "deposits," the word used by the man who invented her.

It's a hot seller, and the first year it was out, it was being scalped for as much as $50, although its market price is somewhere between $11 and $16.

The inventor, George Giordano, went to shopping centers in the Cincinnati area and interviewed mothers and fathers in the toy departments to see if they would buy one if Kenner produced it.

"The only negative reactions were from people over 40," says Giordano, a former school teacher. "And if people in Cincinnati, which is a very conservative town, could accept it, I figured it would sell."

Hughes' last years

Sunless, joyless half-lunatic life

NEW YORK (AP) — A new book says Howard Hughes' last 15 years were a "sunless, joyless, half-lunatic life" during which the few aides who saw him may have been more loyal to others.

Excerpts from the book by James Phelan, "Howard Hughes — The Hidden Years," appear in the current issue of Time Magazine. Similar descriptions of Hughes' last years were reported Sunday by the New York Times from its own sources.

The book is based on information Phelan obtained from Hughes' personal servants, Gordon Margulis and Melvin Stewart, who took care of his personal needs and carried him from place to place after he was bedridden by a broken hip.

Margulis, 45, who first got close to Hughes as a Las Vegas busboy delivering food to Hughes' penthouse, and Stewart, 49, who first met Hughes as his barber and later became his nurse, are each to receive a third of the royalities from the book, Time said.

Time says that in the book Stewart and Margulis concede that Hughes' hotel-room prisons were set up of his own volition, but "imply that the aides and doctors made no attempts to persuade him to change a way of life in which he was literally wasting to death."

The Times' sources were quoted as saying that for the last 10 years of his life Hughes spent almost every minute in a bathrobe in hotel rooms, behind windows covered to shut out light and prying eyes.

The former servants describe Hughes as hooked on drugs, at first tranquilizers and later a clear fluid he injected himself by hypodermic, Time said. And the magazine said the two verify reports that he neglected his appearance until his beard hung to his waist, his hair halfway down his back and his fingernails two inches long.

He was so obsessed with contamination from germs, Time says, that secretaries who typed memos that eventually would go to Hughes had to wear white gloves. When he was being lifted by an attendant he would put a tissue on the palm that grasped the other person, calling it "insulation," the magazine said.

Stewart recalls that he was first called to cut Hughes' hair in 1961 and, after a wait of several hours, was ushered into Hughes' presence, he expected an appropriate billionaire's hideaway "with Rembrandt paintings on the walls and exquisite furniture."

Instead, Time quoted him as saying, he found a skinny, naked man sitting on an unmade bed. "His hair hung about a foot down his back. His beard was straggly and down to his chest."

When Stewart started to put his barber tools on a chair, the magazine says, Hughes shouted a protest and ordered an aide to "get some insulation for our friend to put his equipment on." Stewart says he later received $1,000 for the haircut.

During one long period, Time said, Margulis recalled that Hughes' diet consisted entirely of canned chicken soup.

"It was not unusual for Hughes to take eight hours to consume the two bowls of soup produced by a single can," he said. "He would eat a spoonful and then get interested in watching a movie on his projector — often a movie he had already seen 20 times. The soup would cool down and he would send it back to be reheated. It had to be heated carefully, so that it would be hot enough but not too hot."

Officials of Hughes' Summa Corp. are concerned about the effect publication of the book might have on scheduled court fights over the billionaire's estate and such government decisions as whether Hughes Aircraft such will be awarded a $1-billion helicopter contract this week, according to the Times.

A spokesman for Summa said the company had no comment on the reports.

AND SO ON — Hands dart from behind paint spraying machinery as lips, cheeks and eyes are applied by 10 workers in 10 steps to produce the face of "Wake Up Thumbelina."

Doll market—

He then produced a five-page thesis which he entitled "The Phenomenon," showing the company the idea would work.

"Baby Alive came out at just the right time," Giordano says. "Five years before that, it would not have sold."

The majority of America's dolls are made in the Far East. Wages are lower there than in the United States and doll-making requires a lot of labor. There is no automation.

Each Thumbelina doll, for instance, is handled by 150 persons at the factory in Queens, N.Y., including 10 people who do just the face.

One sprays on the lips, another the cheeks and so on down the line.

Dolls frequently are packaged in boxes with open windows so the prospective buyer gets a good look.

"The appearance is still the key factor," says Weintraub. "Ugly dolls have been tried and they just don't sell. No matter what the doll does — cries, crawls or whatever — the fact is the customer and the child have to look at it first."

Belli, King of Torts: Attorney reviews stormy career fighting law system 'stacked against the little man'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Melvin Belli is nothing if not zestful. And age doesn't seem to curb that zest, or his booming practice as "The King of Torts."

By Jack Schreibman
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lawyer Melvin M. Belli, who estimates he's won as much as $100 million in civil damages in a stormy career of fighting a "system stacked against the little man," considered the approach of his 70th year.

He gave the prospect a moment's thought, stretched his well-fed bulk on a squeaky spring chair in a corner of his opulent Victorian office and murmured, "I'm going to practice as long as I can."

In his 43 years of practice, Belli has indeed made an impact upon the sector of law dealing with personal injury, notably medical malpractice. Not for nothing is he known as "The King of Torts," the odd legal tag for a wrongful civil act for which the victim may sue.

Despite the reputation for his specialty, Belli's most spectacular case was the unsuccessful defense of Jack Ruby, the man millions of television viewers saw kill Lee Harvey Oswald, assassin of President John F. Kennedy. Ruby died before a second trial.

Belli, who blames the 1938 death of his father, Caesar, on an improperly filled prescription, refined a courtroom technique he describes as "show-and-tell." Stated simply, his theory is: "Showing the jury what happened is better than only telling them."

Belli claims he literally stumbled on the value of demonstrative evidence early in his career after he tripped and dumped dozens of prison made knives in front of a jury trying a San Quentin inmate for murder. The panel, convinced of self-defense, came back with an acquittal.

"I had learned a valuable lesson," he said, "one which had been only half realized" during his education at Boalt Hall, the law school at the University of California at Berkeley.

With this firmly in mind, Belli commenced the second trial of a damage suit brought by Katherine Jeffers, a woman who stepped off a San Francisco streetcar in 1941, was knocked down by a trolley going the other way and lost her right leg below the knee. The first award of $65,000 was set aside as excessive.

The second time around Belli came into court carrying a package wrapped in butcher paper. Day after day the unopened package lay on his table. A chill ran through the courtroom.

Had Belli brought the amputated leg into court?

The attorney for the railway argued that the woman could be fitted with an artificial leg that would leave her as good as new. Then Belli slowly started opening his package, knot by knot. Finally, he ripped off the paper, turned suddenly to the jury and held aloft an artificial limb.

Belli dumped the ersatz leg into the lap of a juror, intoning with bitter irony, "Take it. Feel the warmth of life in those soft tissues of its flesh, feel the pulse of blood, touch the rippling muscles of the calf."

The jury came back with a $100,000 verdict.

Up went the skull and crossbones on a staff atop the Belli Building. The flag is hoisted to the top for a win, to half-staff in a loss.

Belli's loves are Lia, his fourth wife, their daughter, Melia, and Caesar, his son by another marriage, and the building at 722 Montgomery St. Outside hangs a shingle: "Melvin M. Belli. Lawyer."

Entering the Belli Building is to walk into the last century, a boggling splash of red velvet Victoriana and Old West, 150-year-old redbricks, huge redwood beams, pillars that were once ships' masts, and old wrought iron.

The walls of Belli's office are covererd with 10-tier bookshelves crammed with Blackstone, Belli and bourbon bottles, and dozens of other ancient bottles and apothecary jars standing sentinel on the shelves. The high ceilings are trimmed in gold, with an occasional golden cupid gazing down. Behind a huge 1800s desk a fireplace glows anytime Belli is in. A huge mahogany bar that came around the Horn and slaked the thirst of the menfolk of Belli's birthplace in Sonora, in the Sierra foothills, bulks huge along one side of the room.

S. Africa—visions of 'Armageddon' in land of apartheid

EDITOR'S NOTE: More than ever, the prospect of race war in South Africa is forcing many people in that troubled country to reconcile themselves to change.

By Larry Heinzerling
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, So. Africa (AP) — The police guns fired in the dusty streets of Soweto to crush black revolt were loaded over three centuries ago and now they're raising visions of Armageddon in the land of apartheid.

The battle lines were first drawn when whites landed in Cape Town in 1652, and the conflict spread as white pioneers in wagons drawn by oxen penetrated South Africa's interior.

Today four million whites rule 18 million blacks, 2.3 million persons of mixed race, and 709,000 Asians.

Can such domination continue? The Zulu wars of the 19th century were a black rebellion against white control. So was the resistance to apartheid that resulted in the Sharpsville massacre of 1960. Now there is another major, perhaps historic, explosion of black frustration. The racial fighting since last June has left 370 blacks and three whites dead throughout the country. Numerous black leaders have been jailed.

"People must be left in no doubt at all that the white man in South Africa is prepared to shed the last ounce of blood to protect what is legitimately his," says Wimpie de Klerk, a prominent white newspaper editor.

"If indeed that is the attitude going the rounds of this country, I want to give an equal assurance that black people are prepared to shed the last ounce of blood to ensure that they get what is legitimately theirs," retorts Percy Qoboza, a prominent black newspaper editor.

The future of South Africa, a strategic, minerally rich and beautiful land, hangs on whether those two views can be reconciled.

Optimism fades with a glance at the Soviet-backed black nationalist guerrilla wars in neighboring Rhodesia and in South African controlled South-West Africa (Namibia).

Hope is fragile in the face of white intransigence, the crowded jails, the oppressive structure of racial discrimination and black anger.

White-ruled South Africa could become a lonely pariah on a black continent in a world that rejects a system that U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has branded "incompatible with human dignity."

But the white police who quelled the rioting in Soweto and the other segregated black townships with guns and tear gas underlined a fact of life: South Africa's government is able and willing to crush dissent.

Black militants speak of revolution, the start of urban terrorism and even guerrilla war to end white rule here. There is little doubt that strategic bombings of key buildings in major urban centers, guerrilla incursions from, say, a blackruled Rhodesia or Mozambique, general strikes and continued black upheaval would have an impact.

But few observers question the ability of South Africa's military and police to deal ruthlessly with uprising at home and guerrilla attacks across its borders. By African standards, South Africa's military might is awesome and the most technoligically advanced south of the Sahara.

The answer, according to the philosophy of Prime Minister John Vorster's government, is partition of the land into independent white and black areas.

The independence on Oct. 26 of Transkei, the first of nine black tribal homelands to be granted sovereignty, says the white government, is the wave of the future. The blueprint calls for partitioning that grants the black majority 13.7 per cent of South Africa's land area with the remainder reserved for whites.

Blacks now living in "white" urban areas would continue to be regarded as hooked in his striped trouser pocket.

Belli was discussing judgeships, and how lawyers like himself, getting on in years and with many battles behind them, might welcome an appointment to the bench.

"I would never want to be a judge," insisted the graythatched barrister. "I think I'm too controversial to be a judge." So he's busy with civil actions, a promotion tour for his new book, and plans to visit Tibet — the one place in the world he says he's never been — to write a magazine article about that little-known country.

Belli was born on July 29, 1907 to Caesar Arthur and Leonie Mouron Belli. The lawyer-to-be said of his juvenile education, "I always wanted to know why a thing was so ... I liked to chew over things."

When he was 10, the family moved 50 miles from Sonora to the boomtown of Stockton, where, shortly before his scheduled graduation from high school, Belli got roaring drunk and was denied commencement by a vindictive principal — temporarily.

It was then that Belli received his first important lesson in the power of the law. His father went to see a friendly old judge who slapped together 15 yards of writs, habeas corpuses, bench warrants, subpoenas and old bail bonds, and "served" them on the principal.

"And I got my diploma on the spot. It was the most majestic legal encounter in my entire life. I knew I'd be a lawyer — the best damned lawyer in the land."

Belli says that early on he wanted to get into personal injury or tort law. "I felt that our economic system, like our criminal system, was stacked against the little man ... maybe the poor man in America could have as much justice as the rich man."

Two years ago the California State Bar suspended Belli for a month for allegedly violating legal ethics by appearing in an advertisement for a whiskey. The Jolly Roger was dropped to half-mast, and Belli charged off to Japan for the duration.

Belli crossed swords with the California Bar again last year over his criticism, on the Merv Griffin Show, of a judge Belli claimed should have disqualified himself in an injury case in Washington.

After defending himself, Belli was cleared and received only a reprimand for making "injudicious statements."

Today, a millionaire many times over, Belli has an office in Los Angeles in addition to his ornate office in San Francisco. Each supports 10 lawyers, two researchers and two investigators. In addition, Belli is in partnership with a group of lawyers in New York and another in Washington.

Belli said the minimum fee in his office is $15,000.

The exception: "If there's a hardship case; they've been to other lawyers and it's a case where somebody's got to do something because the poor bastard's going nuts, then we'll take on a case like that."

The word most often used to describe Belli is "flamboyant." Belli loves it. He's proud to bursting of his talent as a lawyer, and his elegant style — from his Texas boots to his redlined Seville Row suits.

Grand dame of theatrical past comes 'back to life'

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The 81-year-old grande dame of Milwaukee's musical and theatrical past has come back to life, restored to her original turn-of-the century splendor.

After undergoing two years of extensive renovation and refurbishing at a cost of $2.5 million, the historic Pabst Theater, called "a grand example of opulent Victorian Baroque," has reopened.

The landmark, host to the greats of music, dance and drama for almost 75 years, will fill the city's need for an intermediate-size facility (1,388 seats) for both professional and amateur groups, according to Alan McCracken, executive director of the theater.

Originally commissioned in 1895 by Captain Frederick Pabst, from whom the Pabst Brewery takes its name, the theater was hailed by critics as "the finest in the land."

In 1953, Frederick Pabst, son of the Captain, sold the theater to the Pabst Theater Foundation, and in 1960 it was purchased by the Common Council of Milwaukee. Despite being refurbished in 1961, the theater kept losing money and when the gleaming new Performing Arts Center opened in 1969, the Pabst closed its doors.

By then the theater had deteriorated badly and there was talk of razing it to make way for a parking lot, but Mayor Henry W. Maier spearheaded a movement to preserve it. With August U. Pabst, great grandson of the Captain, he was instrumental in Milwaukee's decision to operate the theater as a "city landmark," so designated in 1967, and in its ultimate restoration.

In 1974, with Mark Pfallar Associates as architects, the project began, funded by the city, the Pabst Brewing Company and the Pabst family, and a federal grant for which it became eligible when in 1973 it was included in the National Register of Historic Places.

The building needed modernization in plumbing, heating, air conditioning and electrical work. Backstage and dressing rooms were remodeled, the orchestra pit was enlarged and a hydraulic elevator was installed to raise and lower the pit to give the theater the flexibility of a thrust stage. Finally, a new pipe organ, the largest theater organ in the state, was installed.

The Conrad Schmitt Studio, which had participated in the first major renovation in 1928, was called in to direct the renovation. Thousands of hours went into research to insure authenticity in recapturing the turn-of-the-century feeling.

First, the exterior was cleaned. The facade, with its wrought iron canopy over the sidewalk and entrance reminiscent of the New Orleans French Quarter, was for the most part intact. A small wrought iron balcony, a part of the original, was replaced, as were two gold leaf urns and a lyre on the roof atop a stone pediment inscribed simply "Pabst Theater."

Inside, once the dust and grime were removed, painting began. All of the colors were mixed by hand to get the right shades and within the hall itself up to seven coats of paint were applied.

Originally, the hallways and outside walls had a rich texture that suggested red silk brocade. To simulate this at reasonable cost, a high gloss red paint was applied, followed by stippling — dipping a cloth in deep red varnish and hand-rolling it on the wall surface.

Gold and silver leaf was applied to the profusion of deliçate plaster work. By the time the artists had finished they had spent two years and had covered the interior with nearly 40 different colors of paint.

Red, in varying tones, is the predominant color as it was in the original, with a cherry red carpet and seats upholstered in burgundy velour. A white marble staircase ascends to the balcony from the lobby, lit by crystal chandeliers that have been added.

citizens of the rural tribal homelands without claim to any political rights in the larger "white" homeland.

"There is no other option as a solution to our problem but separate development," says Minister of Police James T. Kruger. "We will have to learn to love this policy — all South Africans, black and white and love it, warts and all, because there is no option."

Nor did Kruger, a key figure in the government, see any chance of the nine million blacks living in white areas being incorporated into white political life.

Blacks in white urban areas, although they may never have seen their officially designated homelands, are still regarded as citizens of those homelands. They are, in this view, regarded as "temporary sojourners" in white areas.

But the official view is increasingly under attack not only by the small white opposition parties ranged against the ruling Nationalist Party but by leading members of the Afrikaner establishment. The Afrikaners are descendants of Dutch and French Huguenot pioneers, and they dominate the National Party and South African political life.

"The system can't work as it is and it is not going to work as envisaged," says Ben Vosloo, an Afrikaner academic. "We have to find a new blueprint for the country."

What is being discussed, by Afrikaner academics, businessmen, clergy and some politicians, from a variety of angles, is a political formula that would accommodate all races while preventing whites or blacks from dominating each other.

Some have suggested a form of federation or confederation between white and black homelands while others have suggested partitioning the land into black, white and multiracial zones.

"No formula that does not have equal rights as its clear goal will not meet the demands of the times," says Piet Cillie, editor of Die Burger, one of the most influential Afrikaner newspapers.

Jan Marias, a prominent Afrikaner banker and head of the South African Foundation, echoing the views of many fellow businessmen, also has called for a "redesigned and refined homelands policy and-or a federal concept ensuring a secure and happy future for all whites as well as blacks."

Whatever the future, Vorster has warned that the alternative to a peaceful resolution of Southern Africa's problems is "too ghastly to contemplate."

It is that alternative that may ultimately convince South Africans of the need for change.

HOMES ON HILLS?

Mountain Meadows, vacant from Ganesha Boulevard east to the developed portion of the Ganesha Hills, is envisoned as a site for 50 or more "executive" homes under the redevelopment process. A decision on whether to proceed with the plan is expected Monday night.

With turbulent past

Public 'renewal' has ups, downs

Scores of cities in California have entered the redevelopment field — Los Angeles, San Francisco, Long Beach and Pasadena to name some of the big ones.

But smaller towns are also using the process in an attempt to broaden their tax base with commercial, industrial and residential growth.

Some are succeeding. Some are not. Some communities have erupted amid charges of "giveaways" and "deals."

Indeed, Pomona has also heard such charges, with critics quick to point out that the land upon which the Speidel Building sits at Park Avenue and Fourth Street was "sold" to the developer for $1.

If there is one thing that seems to be universal about redevelopment it is that it is totally different from community to community.

For example, the city of Redondo Beach entered the redevelopment game in 1964, hoping that a deteriorating downtown sector with poor street alignment and postage-stamp parcels could be revitalized.

Bob Riley, Redondo Beach city manager, says the original idea was to build about 1,500 multiple-family residential units in the area, along with a smattering of commercial activities.

'The city has a financial game plan and redevelopment is a part of it . . .'

Confusion and ill feelings about redevelopment dragged the plan to a standstill. Lawsuits by private individuals and the creation of the California Coastal Commission pushed the matter into the courts.

As a result, today, over 12 years later, the matter is still not resolved.

"I hope we can eventually complete the project. But I know the citizens here would never support another redevelopment project," Riley said.

The tax implications incumbent in the "tax increment" financing system, plus the need to relocate families and businesses, stirred up most alarm, Riley explained.

In the community of Brea, only 10 or 12 miles from Pomona, the story is completely different.

Brea entered into the redevelopment process about four years ago, according to City Manager Wayne Wedine.

At first a revitalization program for an older section of town was proposed. The plan called for the relocation of families. As in Redondo Beach, that stirred up emotions and the plan was dropped.

Instead, Brea officials passed a redevelopment plan that encompassed mostly vacant land near the Orange Freeway.

Bonds totalling $8 million were sold and the money invested in redevelopment, with the result that a major shopping mall is now under construction and expected to open next August.

"Without redevelopment I have no doubt that the mall would have been built in Diamond Bar or Fullerton. It has been a very positive law for this community," said Wedine.

To attract the regional shopping center, Brea has paid for storm drains, sewers and street improvements for the site.

In return, said Wedine, Brea expects to get almost $2 million a year in sales taxes, and once the bonds are paid off, the city hopes to reduce the municipal tax rate from the current $1.40 per $100 of assessed valuation, to under 50-cents per $100 assessed valuation.

"Another interesting factor here," he said, "is that redevelopment also stimulated surrounding areas with the result that new industry has been built in Brea."

In addition to the 5,000 construction jobs created by the redevelopment boom, Wedine expects creation of "permanent" jobs totaling more than 2,500.

"The city has a financial game plan and redevelopment is part of it. You have to have a balanced approach. To be healthy you have to have a strong industrial and commercial tax base to relieve pressure on the homeowner.

"We think redevelopment is helping accomplish that here," he said.

Battling blight:

Redevelopment — public partners active in private enterprise system

California is one of a dozen states with redevelopment laws allowing cities to become active partners in the private enterprise system by buying, selling and improving land to promote the community's growth.

The California Community Redevelopment Law, which can be implemented in any town in the state by a vote of the local city council, prescribes certain processes that must be followed by cities in the formation and financing of redevelopment areas and projects.

First step in the legal process is a declaration by the local council of the general need for redevelopment and the creation of a redevelopment agency to oversee redevelopment activity.

Pomona City Council took that step on Aug. 27, 1966 and appointed itself — the council — the redevelopment agency, which is allowable under the law. Concurrently, the council also formed a redevelopment commission to serve in the same capacity as the planning commission for non-redevelopment matters.

Next step in the process is formation of "survey" areas — which means the agency and commission studies a given area to determine whether redevelopment would be appropriate and feasible.

As part of such a study public hearings must be held and the agency must determine, if the process is to continue to the next stage, that "blight" does exist in the area and that redevelopment should occur.

By definition "blight" can mean almost any deteriorated or underdeveloped area — meaning vacant land can qualify.

Once the study is completed, which can be done in weeks if the city is determined to move quickly, the city then holds public hearings to consider formal adoption of a project area — which opens the area up to potential developers under agreements with the city.

Pomona's first two project areas, in the downtown sector, received approval in 1969.

What is apparently destined to be the city's third project area, Mountain Meadows, will be considered for adoption Monday night by the council.

Two other areas, East Holt Avenue and South Reservoir Street, are still in the study phases.

The only major redevelopment projects completed to date in Pomona are the Speidel Building completed in 1972, and the Bank of California built in 1974. Both are located in Project Area 1, which is generally the West Pomona Mall south to Mission Boulevard.

A third project for this area is moving toward fruition, according to City Administrator Jerrold Gonce. That project is the proposed Vanir Plaza on the northwest corner of Mission and Garey Avenue, composed of a two-story structure housing a bank, offices and another business unit — perhaps a restaurant.

No projects have every been completed in Project Area 2, which is generally Pomona Mall East to Towne Avenue and south to Mission.

At various times projects such as a hotel-convention center, international villages and other grandiose plans appeared on paper, mostly before 1972, but the reality of the downtown situation eventually shattered such visions.

In spite of the relatively nominal activity in redevelopment downtown since 1969, completion of the Vanir

FIRST PROJECT

The Speidel Building in downtown Pomona was the city's first major redevelopment project, built in 1972. Critics say the structure embodies the worst in redevelopment because its assessed value has never reached expectations and the land on which it was built was sold to the developer for $1. The nearby Bank of California is the only other major project.

Rules for redevelopment

Pomona's current study of the feasibility of creating redevelopment project areas along Reservoir Street, Holt Avenue and in the Ganesha Hills area, has prompted many property owners, especially homeowners, to question their rights under the redevelopment process.

Perhaps the most important aspects for property owners to learn about the redevelopment process is what redevelopment does not do. For example:

—Redevelopment does not suspend or interfere with the property owner's right to buy, sell or use land in accordance with existing zoning and usage regulations.

—Redevelopment does not decrease or increase the amount of property taxes the property owner will pay. Property taxes continue to be based on the property's assessed value, which is determined by market value regardless of whether the property is in a redevelopment project area or not.

—Redevelopment does not guarantee that specific property will ever be developed. That depends on whether a private developer seeks the property.

So exactly what does redevelopment do?

It allows the city to purchase property, even if the property owner does not wish to sell , and make improvements on the property and resell it to a developer upon condition that a certain kind of development occurs.

All of which means that if you own a piece of property within a redevelopment project area, the city can force you to sell the property to the city.

The redevelopment law does provide safeguards for the property owner, however. They include:

—Property owners selling real estate to the city under the redevelopment process must be paid "fair market value" for their property as determined by an independent appraisal.

—In addition to the market value, the city must also assist the dislocated property owner in finding a new home or business location of equal nature, even if that requires the city to pay as much as $15,000 in excess of the price of the purchased property.

—Reasonable relocation costs must be borne by the city. For instance, if a homeowner were forced to sell his Pomona property and find a new home in Pomona, or Covina, or Alta Loma, or some other location within the general region, the city would have to pay reasonable expenses for moving to the new location. Obviously, however, the city is not going to pay for a move to Indiana or Rhode Island.

To live or not to live . . .

A proposal by a member of the Pomona Board of Education that all administrators and new teachers of the district be required to live in the district is bound to raise a few hackles among the troops.

The idea is not new. For many years the board of education has made it pretty plain that it expects its top administrators, the superintendent and his assistants, to reside within the district. And they have complied.

But there is no written rule or policy to back it up. A few years ago an informal survey of school district employes disclosed that somewhat fewer than half of them resided within the school district.

At one time the argument that superior teachers could not be found without going outside the district might have been valid but in today's market, with a surplus of good teachers available, this does not hold water.

Pomona's city charter has a rule regarding residence of the city administrator in Pomona but it is so loosely worded that it can easily be circumvented. And there have been mumerous public charges that it has.

We seriously doubt that residence as a condition of employment can be effectively legislated and enforced.

However, we believe that Pomona would be a better place economically and socially if all city and school employes did indeed make their homes in the community where they are employed.

Hospitals sign leases

Both the American Hospital Association and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare say that the cost of hospital care will go up again next year.

Hospitals in one typical major metropolitan area expect to be paying about 6 per cent more for sutures and 14 per cent more for anesthetic gases. Laboratory supplies and chemicals and X-ray film will cost 10 to 12 per cent more, as will housekeeping, laundry and maintenance supplies and food. Wages and benefits for hospital workers will similarly rise.

One result of such steadily mounting costs is that hospitals around the country are finding that the replacement of obsolete equipment with up-to-date technology may be more than their budgets will allow. For example, a portable X-ray unit that cost $2,500 20 years ago now costs $14,000.

This not only means that many hospitals cannot acquire the sophisticated equipment needed to provide quality medical care. Many doctors will not practice in areas isolated from technological innovation.

As recently as 1973, nearly 140 counties in the United States were without a single resident physician.

Fortunately, a growing number of hospitals, large and small, are meeting the problem by leasing big-budget medical equipment. According to the American Hospital Association, over 50 per cent of U.S. hospitals have adopted leasing programs to cut their equipment expenditures.

Demand for leasing is particularly strong in the area of emergency care, says Richard D. Ringe, president of Trans Union Leasing, a major company in the business. Emergency room visits jumped from 22 million in 1972 to more than 60 million in 1975 and now account for more than 25 per cent of all hospital admissions.

Besides easing budget pains, another advantage of equipment leasing, he says, is that it eliminates the threat of obsolescence. When equipment is no longer current, a hospital simply transfers to whatever is new by signing a new lease.

Think on these things

To step past the persons we used to be, even life as it used to be, takes courage unequalled in other times and in other situations. We even question whether we are strong enough — big enough — to do what we have had thrust upon us to do. And yet, the bigness and the strength is not the question at all, but our intent is the important thing.

Do we intend to overcome? If we do, we have no need to worry about the ability, for it comes minute by minute, as we need it, as we can use it. A firm decision to go forward will open doors and hearts that half-hearted effort would dare not touch. When we resolve to do what needs to be done, we mold our own futures.

Since none of us are totally spiritual and all of us are temporal to a degree we can recognize that the two are intertwined — necessary to each other. Just as these days leading up to the Holy days are mixtures of many things — spiritual and the simple dailyness of living together.

It is so easy to forget during all the festivities to remember why these days are set aside to rejoice and be glad. Far too many times someone yells "commercial" when the heart doesn't know the word. Too often, gifts are given because it is expected instead of serving as a symbol of real love.

Taxpayers are the losers

Dear Editor:

In my 40 plus years on this planet, I have never thought it necessary to write a letter to the persons who are supposed to be running our government. Although this letter will probably be categorized as "just another one of the kooks," I still feel it is necessary to express my ire.

My total tax bill, either through direct or indirect taxes, is approximately 41 per cent of my gross income (I can defend this number with facts, if necessary). My house tax went up 80 per cent this year, as did many others. I have heard through the media that the approximate average property tax raise is 20 per cent this year.

The Board of Supervisors, through its "great wisdom," was able to trim the tax bill by one per cent (after the taxpayers' ire influenced them). As far as blame is concerned, the Board of Supervisors blames the assessor's office and vice versa, but the taxpayers are the losers. As far as I am concerned, with the attitude the public officials show towards the taxpayers, I have no recourse but to say no incumbent will be in office come next election. The public officials portray the sham of concern at what the people think of government, while in reality, they are disregarding our real needs and concerns.

A second pardon?

WASHINGTON — Former Vice President Spiro Agnew, convicted of income tax evasion in 1973, has sought a presidential pardon from the man who succeeded him, Gerald Ford.

White House attorneys, perhaps recalling the uproar over their boss's pardon of Richard Nixon, politely but firmly referred Agnew's lawyer to the Justice Department.

Agnew's bid for a pardon came shortly after October 10, when his sentence of three years probation expired. An Agnew attorney called White House counsel Philip Buchen's office.

The conversation "was very low key, very professional," a White House official confided. The brief discussion, we have learned, centered on the "receptivity" of the White House to a formal filing for a pardon by Agnew.

"The reply was that there have been procedures established by Justice," the White House official told us. "The request was no more than any good lawyer would do for his client."

Agnew resigned in disgrace on Oct. 10, 1973 when he pleaded no contest to a single count of tax evasion. The plea, equivalent to a conviction, helped Agnew avoid a messy public trial.

At the time, the Justice Department filed a detailed statement which showed that Agnew began accepting payoffs in 1967 when he was governor of Maryland. The payments continued right up to January, 1973, when a federal grand jury began investigating Agnew.

Footnote: We can find no evidence that Agnew took his plea for a pardon to the Justice Department. His lawyer, Judah Best, declined comment.

CAUTIONING CARTER — In finding a labor secretary, Jimmy Carter is caught between the two groups who punched through his election, the blacks and Big Labor.

The Congressional Black Caucus, in a strongly worded private letter to Carter, urged him not to appoint former Ford administration Labor Secretary John Dunlop as his own top man at Labor.

But Big Labor cherishes Dunlop for resigning after President Ford welched on a promise to support a pro-labor bill. Labor leaders, therefore, are strongly backing Dunlop for the job.

The caucus asserted that Dunlop "demonstrated insensitivity" to minority groups by making "no effort" to upgrade the Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance. The office is supposed to enforce civil rights laws with federal contractors.

To select Dunlop for the Labor Department job, charged the black legislators, would "be a signal that the new administration is not to begin afresh with a new direction."

Meanwhile, in a recent court deposition, Mary Lepper, the former director of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's higher education division, has also blasted Dunlop.

She swore that Dunlop, as a Dean at Harvard in 1970-73 "opposed . . . setting goals and time tables" for attracting more women and minority employees to the Ivy League school.

Dunlop, now back at Harvard, twice refused to discuss his record with us. "I'm a private citizen . . . not a candidate for office," he said. "Write any damn thing you please."

Footnote: In fairness to Dunlop, he generally received high marks as Secretary of Labor.

MINERS' FEUD — We recently reported that Arnold Miller, the reform-minded president of the United Mine Workers, suffers from a tarnished image inside the UMW.

Miller has also been feuding with the union's highly-respected secretary-treasurer, Harry Patrick. Their rift has led to the possibility of a return to power by followers of former UMW boss Tony Boyle, who was convicted of the murder of a UMW leader, "Jock" Yablonski.

In a private letter to Miller, Washington attorney Joe Rauh, who led the fight to oust Boyle from power, pleaded with Miller to meet with Patrick and make peace.

"All the enemies of union democracy are hoping you and Harry will fight to the end . . . Please . . . say you'll meet us." Despite Rauh's plea, however, Miller pulled out of a meeting at the last moment.

Footnote: Miller could not be reached for comment.

WASHINGTON WHIRL — Big banking interests are lobbying to block Rep. Henry Reuss, D.-Wis., from continuing as chairman of the powerful House Banking committee. The pro-consumer Reuss has led the fight for banking reform. This, naturally, has not gone down well with the bankers. Reuss, incidentally, comes from a banking family. But between 1970 and 1973, he gave his entire bank stock, worth $150,000, to various charities.

Biting the hands that feed us

For yet another month our nation's farmers have been punished for their efficiency.

In other segments of our society we tend to reward lethargy and laziness — and even illegitimacy — with a tax-free income that can add up to more than the national minimum wage.

While hard-working, taxpaying farmers — the more they produce — the less they get!

Now that is doing it backward!

And what is even more inexcusably rude, we are biting the hands that feed us!

In November the farmer got less for his beef and pork and corn. The farm parity level has dropped to the lowest it's been since the spring of 1933.

The average price paid to the farmer for all raw farm products declined another 3 percent last month — the fourth straight month of decline. Except for a little increase in the price of soybeans and eggs, farm income would have shrunk even more.

Nonetheless, what the farmer gets from what he sells is now 6 percent below a year ago.

Where are the civil liberties unions and all those other self-appointed crusaders against discrimination? What do they call this, but callous, flagrant discrimination!

You are paying more for your store-bought food — and you are going to pay another 3-to-4 percent more in 1977. While the farmer gets less.

Now that kind of imbalance can go on just so long before the farmer bites back.

I remain unalterably opposed to farmer strikes. There's got to be a better remedy than shooting steers and dumping milk. But history says that no injustice will be suffered indefinitely without a reaction.

And mid-November wheat dropped to $2.46 a bushel which is down from $3.50 a year ago. Combine wheat, rice and rye and those growers are getting 31 percent less than a year ago, while all of their costs of farming have increased.

How can farmers deal themselves in for a fairer shake of this bountiful harvest they are providing for the rest of us?

Their 3 million votes are important; they are enough easily to have tilted the last election either way.

But "disorganized" they have no clout in Washington.

Responsible farmer organizations are their present best bet for national recognition of their cost-price squeeze — and for mounting a rear-guard defense against the bureaucracy which will continue, otherwise, to discriminate against them.

With mandatory "privies in the pasture," no less!

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

All I know is what I read in the newspapers, so in these days when more and more lawyers are specializing in socking the insurance companies, I was only slightly surprised to read a New York lawyer is suggesting that married couples take out divorce insurance. After all, who can blame him for making sure he has an ace in the hole if his automobile liability and medical malpractice insurance cases fall off a bit?

Yes, all I know is what I read in the newspapers — but sometimes that can become a bit confusing. There was a recent story caption in this newspaper, for instance, which read, "FOUR LETTER BOMBS IGNITE". My prurient mind immediately jumped to conclusions. "What nasty four letter sins were those bombs up to?" I asked myself. So you can imagine my disappointment when it turned out the phrase "FOUR LETTER" had a numerical rather than a pornographic connotation. But I'll still give you 10 to 1 the fellow who wrote that caption did so with double entendre aforethought.

Life is slipping away from us

BALTIMORE — (NEA) — The most bizarre aspect of the depressing Gary Gilmore affair is not the killer himself but those multitudes who have all along wished for the killer to be killed. They include the scores who have from the beginning expressed a desire to be on the firing squad, and the array of ordinary men and women who have told pollsters of their ghoulish versions of justice.

There thus has been a lesson in the convict's macabre theater. It has reminded us of what the social chroniclers have said is our failing reverence for life. Once we sanctified existence, even held this as the greatest of our virtues; now, perhaps because we are overcrowded with one another, the society is changing its outlook.

Nowhere is the change more obvious, and pronounced, than in a small portion of the Maryland medical industry known as the Institute for Emergency Medicine. It is a shock-trauma facility which, under the law, approaches the question of life-death with a near surrealistic detachment. Its mission is to save people's lives, but "where necessary" it sometimes serves to take the lives instead.

The state of Maryland considers a person to be legally dead if the brain has ceased totally to function for a period of 24 hours. Hence in such circumstances doctors at the institute are allowed to withdraw life support systems from their patients. Normally the physicians consult with relatives of the subject, other times this is impossible. In a sense, then, euthanasia here has become common practice.

The doctors who work at emergency medicine say that their responsibilities in these matters sound far more frightening than they are. They explain that the shock-trauma unit receives only the worst of emergency patients, those whom under ordinary circumstances have only hours to live. And so when all the wonders of science fail to revive the victims, the allowance of death is humane.

Such is the rationale of the moment. And not only among physicians wrestling with the morality of euthanasia. Abortionists are others who believe that the prevention of existence is merciful in that it is concerned with the right of women to be in control of themselves. And too, those who favor capital punishment feel philanthropic because they are interested in the safety of the vulnerable community.

Even suicide is no longer considered with negative certainty. Books have been written which suggest that under certain conditions people should not only have the right to take their own lives (it is technically illegal), but may have a responsibility to do so. For instance: a desperately sick person who becomes a financial burden to his family; it's now said suicide may be the most honorable relief.

One trouble with this somber trend is that in motion, it has often moved beyond the limits of serious discussion and into the grip of ghastly excess. A Florida state legislator, as example, has tried to create a law in that state which would authorize the extermination of people — such as the retarded — who do not live in a productive manner. Shamelessly, the legislator argues that the business would not only be humane, but would save billions in public assistance.

And then there is the district attorney of Gwinnett County in Georgia. His state has executed more people than any other in modern times — more than 400 since the 1920's — but the Gwinnett D.A. lobbies for even larger numbers by wearing a gold-plated hangman's noose on his lapel. At that he is not alone in his sentiment; when a Virginia legislator recently and bemusedly suggested a return of the public gallows he was beseiged with support from those thinking him serious.

Brave new world's a coming? Already it is an age when politicians can demonstrate that feeding hungry nations is objectionable, that allowing some starvation may be the preferable way to stimulate self-help among the poor. Meanwhile, the homosexuals argue they are healthier than others, for they produce no offspring and therefore no grief.

Life no longer seems to be lost merely by dying. It is slipping away from us, perhaps little by little, in a thousand awful ways.

Rules for raising children

Dear Ann: Will you please reprint your 12 Rules For Raising Children? I was in high school when I read it the first time. Now, ten years later, I have three youngsters and will appreciate it even more. Thank you. — Warren, Ohio

Dear Ohio: With pleasure. Here it is:

12 RULES FOR RAISING CHILDREN

1. Remember that a child is a gift from God, the richest of all blessings. Do not attempt to mold him in your image, or that of your father, your brother, or your neighbor. Each child should be permitted to be himself.

2. Don't crush a child's spirit when he fails. And never compare him with others who have outshone him.

3. Remember that anger and hostility are natural emotions. Help your child to find socially acceptable outlets for these normal feelings or they may be turned inward and erupt in the form of physical or mental-illness.

4. Discipline your child with firmness and reason. Don't let YOUR anger throw you off balance. If he knows you are fair you will not lose his respect or his love. And make sure the punishment fits the crime. Even the youngest child has a keen sense of justice.

5. Present a unified front. Never join with your youngster against your mate. This can create in your child (as well as in yourself) emotional conflicts. It also produces destructive feelings of guilt, confusion and insecurity.

6. Do not hand your child everything his little heart desires. Permit him to know the thrill of earning and the joy of deserving. Grant him the greatest of all satisfactions — the pleasure that comes with personal achievement.

7. Do not set yourself up as a model of perfection. This is a difficult role to play 24 hours a day. You will find it easier to communicate with your child if you let him know that Mom and Dad can make mistakes, too.

8. Don't make threats in anger when you are upset — or impossible promises when you are in a generous mood. Threaten or promise only that which you can live up to. To a child a parent's word means everything. The child who has lost faith in his parents has difficulty believing in anything.

9. Do not smother you child with superficial manifestation of "love." The purest and healthiest love expresses itself in day-in, day-out training which begets self-confidence and independence.

10. Teach your child there is dignity in hard work, whether it is performed with calloused hands that dig ditches or skilled fingers that manipulate surgical instruments. Let him know a useful life is a blessed one and a life of ease and pleasure-seeking is empty and meaningless.

11. Do not try to protect your child against every small blow and disappointment. Adversity strengthens character and makes us compassionate. Trouble is the great equalizer. Let him learn it.

12. Teach your child to love God and to love his fellow man. Don't SEND your child to a place of worship — TAKE him there. Children learn from example. Telling him something is not teaching him. If you give your child a deep and abiding faith in God it can be his strength and his light when all else fails.

Nobody believed in meteorites

Client asks if there really are such things as flying saucers. Am not qualified to offer an opinion on the matter, regret to report. Do know, though, that 200 years ago nobody thought meteors fell out of the sky. Wasn't until April 26, 1803, that astronomers generally accepted the fact. On that day, a batch of small meteorites dropped onto the town of L'Aigle, France. Before then, the world's expert skywatchers claimed all reports of fallen meteors were hogwash.

That the women over the age of 65 outnumber the men of that vintage by seven to five is not news. The statistics are deceptive, however. They do not show just how great the disparity is between the numbers of elderly men who live alone and the numbers of elderly women who do likewise. Fact is most of said women are widows while most of said men remain married. The population of lonely ladies in retirement is immense.

ROBBERS

Get it right, drug addicts when high rarely rob people face to face. People scare them. They sneak in on their little tippy toes to burglarize, instead. Maybe they're dangerous, too, if confronted. But nowhere nearly as dangerous as a sober robber. Who's as dangerous as a sober robber? Nobody.

A snail travels on its own juices, so in fact, a snail's body never touches the ground, unless that ground is salted down. Salt eliminates a snail's juices. Ordinarily, a snail can crawl across a patch of broken glass without hurting itself, but if you wet down that broken glass and throw salt on it, that snail might get cut up.

NOISE

It's not the jittery citizen, but the placid soul who can't concentrate on the job in a noisy room. Or so say the science boys. The more clamor around a tense type of fellow, the more he'll tighten up to zero in on the work at hand. But a lot of raucous activity is apt to distract an easygoing man so badly that he can't get it all together.

He claims he averaged about $30,000 a year before he retired, this thief. In an unsigned letter postmarked from Los Angeles, he writes: "I worked apartments. With a telephone company patch on my jacket and a tool belt around my waist. Working out of a Criss Cross Directory, I dialed apartment numbers until I got one that failed to answer. I just let it ring. If it were still ringing by the time I got there, I entered. If questioned, I said I was answering a complaint about the constant ringing. If nobody asked me anything after all that noise, I figured it was safe to strip the place, and did so."

Dr. Miller

Cockatiel no match for cat

DEAR DR. MILLER: Spunky, my new cockatiel, is young but can he bite hard! He's a pretty tough bird, not afraid of anything including Lady, my cat. She's a bit awed and considerably baffled by him. I figure since Spunky can stand up to her now, he should be able to when he gets older and even stronger, right? — C.G.

DEAR C.G.: Not necessarily. The fact is, Lady's likely to become increasingly curious and/or jealous, or most likely, simply stimulated to pounce on "her" prey. A cockatiel, spunk or not, couldn't stand up to a determined feline charge.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've just consented to having our dear dog operated on and treated for bone cancer. It was in his foot. Did we do the right thing in trying, or should we have had him put to sleep instead? We really wanted to give him his chance for life. Our friends say it would have been kinder not to. — R.Y.

DEAR R.Y.: Undoubtedly your own veterinarian presented the facts and possibilities as he saw them, in as thorough a manner as possible before you made your decision. Prolonged survival rates are seldom achieved with advanced bone cancer in the canine, since the disease has usually metastasized (spread, usually to the lungs). If the disease is detected early enough, however, a combination of surgery, chemotherapy and, in the furure, immunotherapy (now experimental) may give him a reasonable chance.

DEAR DR. MILLER: All this stupid publicity about sharks makes me sick. Why do people insist on calling them vicious when they're only hungry and searching for food, just like other animals do? — R.D.

DEAR R.D.: Sharks, not necessarily vicious, are at least voracious, requiring up to 15 per cent of their body weight in food weekly. They're inclined to be overly eager eaters when the opportunity presents itself — even unborn baby sharks have been known to attack each other while still in the womb. The attack of a large shark on its prey is an awesome event, but how CAN the shark accurately be called more vicious than any other predator except that WE may be its prey? The number of actual attacks on humans by sharks as compared to opportunities sharks have to make such attacks shows sharks seldom take advantage of this opportunity. As is usually the case, Homosapiens is a far greater (if more genteel?) predator against the shark.

Dolls now shocking affairs

I went shopping for dolls yesterday with my neighbor, Lorraine, and was I in for a shock. The toy industry has never heard of the Pill. There were dolls sitting around talking, laughing, crawling, walking, crying, burping, slobbering and filling their diapers.

"I cannot believe this," I gasped. "I used to get choked up when my doll's eyes closed."

"It's a whole new ballgame," she said tiredly. "See this one? It has a battery-operated mouth."

"Don't all children?"

"It also comes with packets of food that you mix and feed with a spoon. An hour or so later, you have to change the diaper."

"If you know this, why would you feed it in the first place?"

"Did you catch the brother doll that is anatomically correct in every detail?"

We both squinted for a closer look and stared at one another numbly. Finally, I said, "That's pathetic."

"Well," she snapped, "what did you expect for $5.95?"

"Do you know what I think?" I observed. "I don't think there's any need for women to go through all the business of having babies anymore. In fact, I'd think twice before I even took on the responsibility of a doll."

"I know what you're saying," she nodded. "Last year, we took on two baby dolls, three teenage dolls and a bionic woman. We're in hock up to our eyeballs. The diaper service runs us $22 a month, the special food $32, and the batteries $18. One of our teenage dolls split. Got her own apartment and . . ."

"She got married?" I asked.

"I don't want to talk about it," she mumbled. "Then the bionic woman was desperate for a bionic beauty salon." Seeing my disbelief, she added, "She can't go to an ordinary shop, you know. She has to have read-outs and tests on her bionic ears."

"I never had a doll with ears until after I was married."

"We've been plagued by trouble," she sniffed. "G.I. Joe became a civilian and needed an entire new wardrobe, Cher became pregnant, and the Sunshine Family went through an ugly divorce. And I hate to tell you what happened to Stretch Armstrong. He's the muscle doll made of rubber who stretches to four feet. His arm got sucked up in the sweeper and now it looks like a tow rope. Frankly, I'm worried about myself. Yesterday, I did a bad thing. I took the batteries out of Little Bubbles."

"What's a mother for?" I said softly.

Dr. Lamb

Questions low ovary removal

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor has recommended I have a hysterectomy. I would be grateful for your opinion. I am 47 and use an IUD. I can't take the pill because of hypertension. I have had long periods of bleeding for around two years, lasting from 20 to 90 days.

I want to keep my ovaries. Would you advise them to be removed, and if so why? My Pap smear was negative. If ovaries are left in does estrogen have to be taken? If ovaries are removed is it necessary to take estrogen? What is the danger of cancer of the vagina and breast when taking estrogen? What could be the results if estrogen is not taken?

My mother died in her early 50s from cancer of the cervix so I really want my uterus out but am in a quandry about the rest.

DEAR READER — It is not a good idea to tie your doctor's hands about what he should do once he is doing the surgery. The decision about your ovaries may well depend upon what he finds. If the ovaries are diseased you may be better off without them.

Your ovaries will be nonfunctioning anyway very shortly. You are close to the menopause if you have not already started it. After the menopause you will not be getting any significant amounts of female hormones from your ovaries. The only function your ovaries could serve then would be to cause trouble for you later.

The biggest danger in leaving the ovaries is in ovarian cancer, which accounts for about five per cent of all cancer deaths in women. It is difficult to treat because it is usually not detected until it has spread. This consideration alone, in a woman nearing the change of life or having already been through the menopause, is a good reason to remove the ovaries at the time of a hysterectomy. In a younger woman with healthy ovaries it might be worth leaving the ovaries alone.

I am not sure why you want to keep your ovaries since they are or will be nonfunctioning very soon. Whether your ovaries are surgically removed or just quit functioning you still face the same question of whether you will need female hormones or not. The answer will depend upon how much estrogen your body produces from other sources. The adrenal gland also produces estrogen compounds, and if it produces enough you may not notice the changes of menopause. If it does not you are likely to have hot flashes with sweating and flushing. You may develop changes in the lining of your vagina and even the bladder which will interfere with the function of both.

You are not likely to develop cancer because of taking estrogen, since you will not have a uterus. There is no good evidence at this point that estrogen increases the occurrence of cancer anywhere else in the body. In point of fact there are studies that show women taking estrogen have less cancer than women who do not — with the exception of cancer of the uterus.

When a young woman has her ovaries removed she will have a premature menopause — a surgical menopause. In these instances female hormones are usually prescribed.

To give you more information about the menopause I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY10019.

Glad you asked

Q: We were eating at Mamma Leone's famous restaurant in New York City recently when a party was greeted with a great hullabaloo. Turned out to be Jimmy Carter and his family. I'm curious about what they ordered. Any way to find out? — Mrs. Alice N., Long Island City, N.Y.

A: Yes. The date was July 12, 1976. And the table the Carter family occupied, manager Bruno tells us, was the same one on which Presidents Hoover, Truman and Eisenhower once were served. The menu included celery, olives, peperoncini and tomatoes; breadsticks and Italian bread, Leone's famous cheese, Antipasto Supreme, Fettuccine All-Alfredo, Veal Piccata (with salad and potato), Mamma's special ice cream with fruit and brandy sauce, bugie, coffee and Verdicchio wine. Only one "speech" was given: Mr. Carter's mother reportedly said, "This was wonderful. Why don't you suggest Leone's open a branch in Plains?"

Q: My grandfather claims that George Jessel once played for the New York Giants baseball team. Is grandpa right? — Mildred Lehr, Oakland.

A: "It's a pop-up for Grandpop — not a homer," says Jessel. "Back in 1909 I was with the Giants, not as a player but as a bat boy."

Q: Has Tom Jones ever explained why female fans first started tossing their panties onto the stage at the end of his act? — Mrs. Harriet B., Knoxville, Tenn.

A: Yes. He said it happened when he was playing the Copa in New York and perspiring freely. Some of the gals at ringside began throwing napkins at him. According to Tom: "There was this one woman (I guess she wanted to get my attention) who threw her panties up on stage. From that point on, it was highly publicized and repeated throughout my career. At first it embarrassed me, then amused me — after I got used to it!"

A: Yes. Harry (Born Ehrich Weiss) adopted his stage name from a famous French magician Robert-Houdin. The Frenchman, sent by his country to settle a revolt in Algeria, demonstrated to the Arab chieftains that his magic was more potent than that of the fanatic Marabout (who'd been advising the chiefs to fight against France). Robert-Houdin put on a show of magic the likes of which had not been seen since the days of Scheherazade, and the revolt was ended.

Q: Has Mickey Rooney retired from pictures? — L. Bogard, Austin, Tex.

A: No way. Two things Mickey will never retire from doing — making a new movie or taking a new bride! Early next year he'll be turning up in Stanley Kramer's "The Domino Principle," an exciting film of intrigue and assassination.

By Bernice Bede Osol
For Monday, Dec. 13, 1976

ARIES (March 2April 19) You start the day with good intentions about doing a good job. If things get tough, shortcuts could spell trouble.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take care with advice today. You lean toward banking too much on sheer speculation and you could steer someone towards a money-losing venture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a good worker around the house today, if left to your own devices. If your mate tries to ride herd on you, you'll balk.

CANCER (June 2July 22) In dealing with people who work for you today, keep things businesslike. Getting too chummy will make a serious dent in their productivity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial conditions are a mixed bag today. Gains will come about in an unusual manner, losses in the same unfathomable way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You have clever ideas today but you may lack the knack to implement them. Be neither too timid in planning nor too bold in execution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today you must be aware of when to stop selling. You can readily acquire what you want if you know how to change the subject when the deal's assured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't impulsively lend anything you truly treasure to friends today. Decide first if the alliance can stand the possible repercussions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your insight concerning business or career is keen today. However, you could foul it up with poor timing if you're not careful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Gauge the capabilities of your audience with great care today. Tell them only what you feel they can comprehend and assimilate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Permitting those who have no business in your affairs to poke their noses in is inviting disaster. Keep them out, even if it means ruffled feathers.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Decisions you might make for selfish resons will not be nearly as advantageous as those which benefit all concerned parties.

Your Birthday, Dec. 13, 1976

Friends will be instrumental this year in creating conditions conducive to your material success. Don't let them down by mediocre performance.

What people say

"I wish I could say something good about the situation here. I don't mean that in a derogatory way."

"I shudder for my country and I shudder for all my people."

—Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, chief minister of Kwazulu, the Zulu homeland in South Africa, where bloody uprisings have been taking place.

You have to 'tune in' to God

I have a favorite radio station that I listen to here in Southern California. When I travel away from home, one of the things I miss most is that I can't pick up my favorite station. Is the station dead? Is it not functioning? Is my radio broken? No, the radio is working and the station is on the air. I'm just too far away to pick up the signal.

Have you "tuned-in" to God? Until you're close enough to hear God's signal you will never discover His power. Get in line with God's will! "How?" you ask. By listening to positive thoughts and filtering out all negative thoughts. It's that simple. God speaks to you through positive thoughts.

Tune in to God's spirit by letting Him move in on wings of beautiful ideas. Possibility thinking will release powers you never knew you had!

U.S. tourists flocking to popular health spas in Israel

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel plans to add another drawing card to its tourist trade by developing ancient mineral spring health resorts once used by Roman conquerers, King Herod and Persian rulers.

"We'll be tapping an additional market," says Michael Gidron of the Ministry of Tourism. "We not only want to be considered as the land of the Bible, but also as the land of fun and health."

Israeli officials predict a record 800,000 foreigners — equal to almost a fourth of Israel's population — will have visited the Jewish state in 1976, due in part to heavy bookings for health spas.

By next fall, Israel plans to complete health spas along the Sea of Galilee capable of treating 3,500 persons for rheumatic and respiratory diseases. Average cost for a two-week stay is $364 or $26 per day — cheaper than similar spas in Switzerland and Germany, said an Israeli spokesman.

According to legend, King Solomon ordered a group of demons who feared the king to enter the earth and heat the waters of a spring near the Sea of Galilee. When the demons began their work, Solomon made them deaf so they would not hear of the king's death and the curative springs would continue.

The shores of the Dead Sea — the biblically famous home of Sodom and Gomorrah — offer natural healing powers found nowhere else in the world, the Israelis claim.

King Herod, his diseased body racked with spasms, itching and shortness of breath, bathed in thermal springs near the Dead Sea some 20 centuries ago. Apparently the springs had little benefit for the elderly king because he died shortly after the bath, wrote Josephus Flavius, a first-century historian.

Hoping for better results, Israelis plan to treat mild ailments like muscle and joint diseases, asthma and emphysema, and will concentrate on curing psoriasis, a skin disease afflicting 2 per cent of the world's population.

"Research concludes that the Dead Sea is excellent for helping psoriasis victims. It is the lowest point on earth so the sun's ultraviolet rays are weak, the climate is moderate all year, the humidity is low, the air is pure and the sky is clear 300 days a year," said Eli Rosenthal, an Israeli pioneer in Dead Sea development.

Of 577 Europeans with psoriasis receiving mineral water and sun treatment at the Dead Sea between 1971 and 1973, 94 per cent improved or recovered, according to Danish researchers brought in to certify the Dead Sea's medicinal value.

Israel invited more than 200 foreign medical experts and educators to the 28th congress of the International Federation of Thermalism and Climatism in October, 1976.

Israeli officials told the convention several European national medical insurance plans could cover the cost of medical care at Israeli spas. They hope the foreign experts will start advising their patients to try Israel's spas.

Civilization catching up to residents of former boom town

SILVERADO, Calif. (AP) — Residents of this old California mining boom town fear civilization is finally catching up with them.

After two years of negotiations with residents of Silverado and neighboring canyons — Trabuco, Modjeska, Baker, Williams, Black Star — officials from the Orange County Planning Department want to allow more intensive development, particularly on canyon bottoms.

The canyons — unincorporated fingers of county territory that reach into the Cleveland National Forest — are sparsely populated, tight-knit communities where heavy denim jeans and cowboy boots have been the style for nearly a century.

Silverado, a silver and coalmining boom town in the late 1800s, is one of the more heavily populated canyons — 750 persons live along the narrow, 4½-mile-long canyon 45 miles from downtown Los Angeles.

Escape has also been a way of life at Trabuco Canyon, where a resort enterprise appropriately called Escape Country is a center for hang gliding as well as picnicking and hiking.

Hazel Betts, assistant superintendent of the Sunday school at Silverado's only church, moved to Silverado with her husband in 1962 from Inglewood. The couple disliked being in the flight path of Los Angeles International Airport.

"The noise was very bad," Mrs. Betts says. "It's quiet up here. Except on weekends or if there's snow on the mountains.

"People from the city like to come out, pile snow on their car and then go home."

The Betts family is not alone in the feeling that aloneness is an asset of canyon life.

"We don't want a lot of homes all along the hillsides," said one housewife whose husband works at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard at night and shoes horses during the day.

County planner Richard Cermak says his department wants to permit up to six housing units per acre on canyon floors, especially 100 acres of flat Irvine Co. land at the canyon's mouth and 80 acres further up the canyon belonging to the old Holtz Ranch, now abandoned.

"The canyon residents are very concerned about the development of the Holtz Ranch," Cermak admits, "but they're not irate — at least not at this stage anyway."

He said only one home per 10 acres would be allowed in hillside areas.

Ironically, residents are worried at a time when the population is about half what it was during its heyday around 1900, when 1,500 persons lived in the canyon, worked in the mines and supported three hotels, two stores and seven saloons.

Steps in redevelopment—

project will bring the city enough revenue to easily pay off the $1.5 million in bonds sold the finance the district, according to Bob Otto, city finance director.

Pay off of the bond debt will be made by the system of "tax increment" revenues.

That system works like this: suppose a vacant piece of land has an assessed value $100,000. Against that assessment the city, school district, county and other taxing agencies levy their tax rates. As an example, suppose the total property tax on the property comes to $10,000 per year.

Now suppose that through redevelopment construction occurs that increases the assessed value of the property to $300,000. The difference between the $100,000 pre-redevelopment value and the new $500,000, becomes the "tax increment."

The property owner will pay taxes on the entire $500,000, but that portion of the taxes paid on the "tax increment" of $400,000 will not go to the city's general fund, or school district, or county. It will go instead to the redevelopment fund for repayment of the redevelopment debt.

That process continues until the total redevelopment debt for the project area is repaid, after which all taxes are distributed in the normal manner to the city, schools, county and all other taxing agencies.

Critics of redevelopment charge that tax increment financing is a drain on other property owners because while taxes go toward redevelopment they are not aiding the school district, for example. That, say critics, forces the school board to hike property taxes in other areas.

Proponents of redevelopment counterargue that without redevelopment the property would continue to have only the $100,000 assessed value, and that once the redevelopment debt is paid the school district will be benefited by the added value.

Upland Christmas program

The 22nd annual Christmas program, presented by the Upland High School Music Department, will be hosted by the Upland High School PTA Thursday at 7:30 p.m., in the auditorium. There is no charge.

The concert will consist of selections by vocal groups, under the direction of Carl Walters, and instrumental groups, under the direction of Al Warren.

Various holiday selections will be performed by the vocal groups, which consist of the acappella choir, the vocal ensemble, the harmony chorus, and the girls' chorus. The marching band, symphonic band, and jazz ensemble, which are scheduled to perform in several concerts in Honolulu, Hawaii, in April of 1977, will also participate in the program.

Some goals realized by some Jewish immigrants

MIAMI (AP) — Some immigrant Israeli Jews say they have found much of what they envisioned in southern Florida plus something they did not — criticism from American Jews.

"Devoted American Jews who have been giving money to Israel don't like to see Israelis here," said Eliezer Kroll, head of Israel's immigration office in Miami.

Tsemach Yariv, a 32-year-old carpenter and entertainer, came here on tour nine years ago, married an American and now has two daughters. He said many people ask if he feels guilty because he left Israel.

"Of course I don't, feel guilty. Israel is an established country. They don't need every last drop of blood," he said.

"In any other country in the world, you can go anywhere you want without questions," Yariv said. "But if you leave Israel, you are always being asked all kinds of questions."

Immigration officials say the aloofness and criticism Yariv has encountered is common for the estimated 3,000 to 5,000 Israelis who live in southern Florida.

Yael Lipof, who came here two years ago when her husband joined the University of Miami staff, said she does feel guilty and would "avoid the company of Israelis who do not intend to return."

She says she came here unwillingly and wants her American husband to return to Israel.

"I am not at all proud that I left Israel. Israelis who remain in Israel feel very bitter toward those who put personal things — money or the advancement of a career — above duty to your country," Mrs. Lipof said.

Israel, with a population of three million, loses some 40,000 residents a year, according to the Israeli Central Bureau of Statistics.

Those who leave are potentially the most productive, with the average age between 25 and 29. U.S. Immigration figures show that 40 per cent of the registered Israeli heads of households are professionals.

While the majority of these immigrants settle in New York City and Los Angeles, many migrate to the large Jewish community in Florida, particularly in Miami Beach.

Saadia Moryosef, 47, said he takes offense when American Jews ask him why he doesn't return to Israel.

"Some take the American way, and some take the Zionist way. Who is to judge?" he said.

Ostracism by the American Jew shows in the statistics. At least 10 Israeli restaurants that opened in Miami Beach over the past five years have closed for lack of support, said Yariv, who advertised them on his radio show. There is no Israeli club or organization here.

Edith Geiger, a Jewish Federation worker, started a project two years ago to bring Israelis into the community.

"The whole thing of Israeli immigration started off in a very negative way," she said. "Israelis were completely secluded by this negative feeling. Even the Hebrew word for them 'Yored' means one who goes down."

DRY RIVER — Dwarfed by the dry bed of the Mississippi River, a man walks along the sand once covered by the deep waters of Old Man River near Memphis, Tenn., recently.

Man falls for hobby like ton of bricks

ROSSENDALE, England (AP) — More than two tons of old, well worn bricks clutter Henry Holt's life. There are more than 700 of them piled high in his home, throughout his garden and around his nearby small land holding.

He loves them. Indeed, he plans to open a museum to show what he claims is the finest exhibition of bricks in the world.

Holt, a 63-year-old retired building and timber merchant, has been collecting bricks for 15 years, ever since he looked down at the rubble of an old cotton mill and saw a brick bearing his surname staring back.

"It started me thinking," said Holt. "'E Holt, Rossendale'. I'd never even heard of the firm and I became curious. I took the brick home and from then on I was hooked. I can't pass a brick now without turning it over to see who made it."

"They need proper care," said Holt, who plans to take over a building near his home for the museum. He believes it will be the first of its kind. "People will then be able to appreciate the fascination of bricks. I can see the day when brick collecting will be a popular hobby."

His wife, Mary, already does.

"Now I've grown as keen as he is," said Mary, a retired schoolmistress. "Brick collecting gets into your blood." She is busy cataloguing all her husband's bricks.

At first, Holt collected bricks only from his native Rossendale. But then he went farther and farther afield on carefully planned expeditions to important buildings that were being torn down. He has become a familiar figure amidst the ruins of old mills, churches, and, especially, railway stations.

Some of his most prized specimens — colored glass bricks — have come from the subways and public conveniences of long unused stations. His oldest specimen, a railway brick, dates back to 1865.

Only bricks with a date or an inscription interest Holt. From these he is able to build a history of brickmaking in several regions, plotting the rise and fall of individual firms.

Inscriptions are found in the "frog" of the brick, the hollow part where the mortar is placed. There are also patterns in the bricks, such as diamonds and a rare figure of eight. One of his bricks contains the EIIR symbol, a tribute to the 1953 coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

Some bricks even have printing errors, and letters that have been inverted. Holt believes that, should his hobby catch on, these specimens should be worth their weight in gold.

People are always curious when they see Holt looking for bricks.

Record low for 'Old man River'

MEMPHIS (AP) — "You never turn your back on that old river out there," the old man on the dock said. "Just when you think you've got it figured out, that Mississippi will turn the tables on you and you'll get bit."

The Mississippi is currently proving him right.

Long feared for its spring floods, the river has lately turned to the other extreme.

A summer-fall drought has reduced the river to a mere shadow of its former self, dropping water levels from Alton, Ill., to New Orleans, forcing river traffic into unaccustomed narrow channels.

Those narrow channels often contain hidden sand bars to trap the unwary river pilot and a long string of barges.

At Memphis the Mississippi fell below the zero mark on the river gauge Aug. 10 and dropped to a record low of minus 5.7 feet shortly thereafter. Since then it has risen slightly, but has basically remained on the downside of the scale.

Beneath a bridge at Memphis, the remains of an old wooden barge — a type that hasn't been seen on the river in 30 years — suddenly appeared on what had been the river bottom until the water receded. Its wreckage drew curious boatmen and photographers for weeks.

Downstream, at Helena, the low water uncovered the wreckage of an oil barge that slammed into a bridge pier four years ago. A salvage crew hurriedly cut the remains apart and towed them away before the river could reclaim them.

Rivermen cursed as they were forced to take expensive and time-consumeing measures to cope with the low water.

Barge-loads of grain destined for New Orleans take eight days to go down river from Memphis in normal time. But as the water level dropped, the time increased to 14 or 15 days.

And the towboat companies were forced to reduce their normal tows from 18 tows to eight or nine barges loaded with 900 tons of freight instead of the normal 1,500 tons.

Despite around-the-clock work by Army Corps of Engineers dredges, there simply isn't enough water to safely float a normally loaded barge through the shallow spots.

And to make things worse, the receding water has forced traffic into narrow channels which made it difficult and even impossible to negotiate without cutting a string of barges in half.

An unwary river pilot who manages to get his tow hung up on a sandbar can block the entire river for hours until he can free himself.

When will it end?

Jerry Clemons, a National Weather Service hydrologist, offered little hope for improvement until spring.

"It's definitely going to be falling off and continue to fall until we get the spring rains," Clemons said. "Some time it comes up again in the fall, but our old record low was in January."

Detroit's inner city

DETROIT (AP) — This municipality will soon have a city within a city that is larger than many towns, villages and suburbs around the nation.

When Renaissance Center, Detroit's new $337-million waterfront complex in the downtown area here, begins full operation in early 1977, it will have up to 20,000 persons as employes, guests and diners, in the four 39-story office towers, the 70-story Detroit Plaza Hotel and the three-level shopping mall.

Politicians need prodding

Seniors' hopes for rewards stirred by Carter's victory

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

The 1976 presidential election is over, yet some of us may continue debating whether "the best man won." Nevertheless, Jimmy Carter will be our 39th president and we hope the next four years will be more rewarding for the Senior Citizens.

I've listened to many campaign speeches and voted in many past presidential elections. But it seemed to me 1976 was the year of the pollsters. Polls had been taken all through the campaign and on Election Day.

Then the pollsters tried to analyze the voting patterns in assorted precincts around the country.

In fact, there seemed to be so many attempts to break down the voting patterns that I was surprised the pollsters didn't try to learn how many right-handed and left-handed people pulled down the voting booth levers or dropped their ballots into the box.

But most surprising to me was the failure of the polls to analyze the voting patterns of the large aging population during the last days of the campaign or on Election Day.

Today there are 22 million men and women over 65, possibly more who have recently grown older and have added more candles to their birthday cakes. Another 19 million are between the ages of 55 and 64. And many of them will have joined us in the ranks of the Senior Citizens before Jimmy Carter completes his four years in the White House.

Add them all together and this reaches a figure of 40 million people, possibly half of all other eligible voters. Even if some of us didn't vote we make up a large and powerful voting bloc for the future. But it is to our credit that as a voting bloc we do turn out to express our preference in goodly numbers. It's important that we learn how to use our numbers and our influence on our people in government to do something for us soon.

I'm optimistic that things will get better for us during the next four years. New President Jimmy Carter in his many speeches repeated his awareness of the problem facing the Senior Citizens and the importance of doing something for them.

The day after his election he said this need to help the older people would be high on his agenda or urgent things to do. The same day our new First Lady, Rosalynn Carter, promised that she would continue her long time work for mental health and the Senior Citizens.

And in the background there's the maternal influence of Miss Lillian. She is in her late 70s and has professed a great interest in the problems of other elderly people.

Our new president may try to direct Congress to enact new legislation which will benefit the older citizens. But it's our representatives in Washington who pass the laws and provide the money to help us live healthier and better lives.

I feel doubly confident that sound legislation benefitting the older population won't be sent back from the White House with a presidential veto.

There may be new faces in the Senate and the House representing some of us and there will also be new chairmen and committee members in the legislative branch dealing with our many problems. But we shouldn't sit around and wait.

It's up to us as individuals and organizations to use our aging but still powerful political muscle to pressure our own representatives in Washington for action — so that we may enjoy decent and rewarding lives.

In Brazil

Mining town has colorful history

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Long before Texas oil millionaires browsed through catalogues offering his and hers Chinese junks for Christmas, a black Cleopatra in a boom town in Brazil was presented with her own galleon and a new lake to sail it on.

Such tales of fabulous wealth and forgotten orgies still abound in Diamantina, Brazil, an 18th-century diamond mining center that has a flavor similar to a Texas oil town.

Diamantina, which is also the birthplace of Brazil's late president Juscelino Kubitschek, is out in the middle of nowhere in the central Brazilian state of Minas Gerais. The town lies in a small valley in a sterile rocky region of sparse vegetation and bright sunlight not unlike some of the tougher regions of the American Southwest.

In the Diamantina area, poor, black, heavily muscled men called "garimpeiros" — free lance miners — still sift through gravel from shallow streams, looking for diamonds with the simple technology of 200 years ago. The swollen bellies of their children testify to the fact that they're not doing too well.

Local people can point out a few examples of men who became wealthy working the diamond fields. You can still run into leathery-skinned, muddybooted men in sweat stained khakis that you'd never suspect owned their own diamond mines, just as you'd never suspect some of the weatherbeaten, grizzled old men in West Texas towns own millions of dollars' worth of oil property.

But the region's glory lies mainly in its past.

The most dramatic local legend is the story of Xica (pronounced Sheekah) de Silva, a Negro slave who became one of the richest, most pampered women in Brazil during the diamond heyday of the 1700s.

Xica was the mistress of Joao Fernandes de Oliviera, an official sent from the Court of Portugal with a concession granting him exclusive monopoly in mining the gems. The concession was signed January 1, 1747, and Fernandes remained in power until 1759, when he was called back to Portugal in disgrace. The enormous fortune he amassed in the diamond fields and the spectacular way he spent it on Xica aroused wrath in Lisbon and caused his downfall.

Xica, whom Fernandes freed, enjoyed living it up. He built her a lake and gave her a boat to sail on it when she grew unhappy in the dry and rocky inland town where she could not see the ocean, according to the legend.

Xica recently became the subject of a Brazilian movie, a colorful and spicy version of her profligate life. Neither history nor the movie explain what happened to the heroine when her lover was taken back to jail in Portugal.

But memories of her parties, her European dresses and her jewels, stirred up a bit by the Brazilian film industry, remain vivid.

Psst...

...wanna buy a cannon?

EL CERRITO (AP) — Pst, wanna buy a used cannon?

They've got them over at the Old West Gun Room, in an array of armament ranging from muskets to magnums. The boss, David Cumberland, even has a piece on loan to the Navy.

The larger items, such as a Hotchkiss two-pound pack howitzer, a standard Army piece from the 1870s, "aren't something the average person buys," says Cumberland. "They are expensive."

Just sold and bearing several coats of glistening black paint is a fully restored, deck-mounted Navy one-pounder made in 1893 by the Driggs Ordinance Co. of New York. The price: $2,500.

Cumberland says they are expensive for another reason besides their looks. When he and his crew finish restoring a gun it usually is in operating condition. That means they must be registered with the government under the 1968 federal gun control law.

Neither price nor red tape has kept the guns from moving, said Cumberland, pointing out that a pair of fancy bronze Russian cannons now decorate the office of a San Francisco lawyer. And another gun buff has an assortment of 15 cannons menacing his Lafayette property.

Cumberland said he has loaned a prized cannon, of the type used by the Navy to accompany landing parties 100 years ago, to the Navy-Marine Corps Museum at Treasure Island.

For his own collection, Cumberland said he has a rare 50 millimeter Krupp steel rifled pack Howitzer, one of a huge purchase he made in 1968 from a worldwide arms broker. He said the buy included 96 mortars and more than two dozen 70 mm. Austrian howitzers.

Cumberland pokes about among a variety of sources for his big boomers, including an area cemetery where he bought a 12-pound mountain howitzer. He found another cannon at a fraternity house at the University of the Pacific in Stockton.

He said that while his greatest satisfaction comes from restoring the old artillery pieces, he gets a kick out of firing them once in a while.

Erskine Caldwell publishes his 51st book, plans to relax

NEW YORK (AP) — Erskine Caldwell thinks it's time to slow down. He used to write a book in a year. Now, he figures he'll take two to do the job.

At 73, the tall, lean Caldwell — best known for his two early novels, "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre," and a book of interrelated stories, "Georgia Boy" — says:

"When you're young you are in a great hurry. You want to do everything right now. But as you get older you tend to become more contemplative, more mature. So you slow down."

Caldwell recently published his 51st book, "Afternoons In Mid-America," and he has no immediate plans to do another.

"I'm not writing anything right now," he says, with a smile. "In fact, I don't want to think about writing. You have to put a book out of your head first before you can start another and this last one is still very close to me. It takes time before you can think of anything else."

Caldwell spent "two long summers" driving from Arkansas to Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma to obtain the material he needed to write "Afternoons In Mid-America."

"It was an ambition I'd had for a long time," he says. "As a boy I lived on the Mississippi River, and I always wanted to find out what was on the other side. I never had a chance as a boy to explore that other side. In later years I passed a lot through that territory — the area covered is essentially the original territory of the Louisiana Purchase — but I never had a chance to really look at it, to study it.

"So about two years ago I figured the time had come, now was the time. And I set out. I was looking to see what kind of people lived there, who they were, what they did, and what they liked, and what they disliked. It was a venture in observation as well as into the personal impressions I would get. And I was impressed by that country. It's a very important part of America."

Caldwell has traveled much during his life. He was born in Georgia — "very close to where Jimmy Carter lives" — where his father served as a minister. "My father went from one church to another," he recalls, "and so my family moved all over the South, I lived everywhere down there."

In later years, he lived in Maine, Connecticut, Arizona, California, served as a war correspondent stationed in Russia during World War II and currently lives in Dunedin, Fla. "I've been in Florida six years," he laughs. "Maybe it's about time to move again."

After working as a newspaperman in his youth, he decided to write stories and books and moved from Georgia to Maine. "I gave up newspapering because I wanted to try writing fulltime, and I'm still trying. When I got to Maine it was during the Depression. It was hard but I raised potatoes and things and I also reviewed books. When I finished the books I sold them for cash and that gave me enough money to live on."

Caldwell published a couple of novelettes and a book of short stories before "Tobacco Road" — a realistic study of poor sharecroppers in the South — appeared in 1932.

"That book gave me enough to live on, but it was not a bestseller at the time. It was published during the Depression and people had no money to buy books in those days. But after it was made into a stage play — it ran for over seven years on Broadway — the book kept on selling and I still get royalties from it."

Caldwell says he "had trouble with the censors" with both "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre." "They were banned across the country," he recalls, "but as the years passed the banning finally came off. The banning never really bothered me. I thought it was just part of being a writer. I didn't let it bother me. I figured someone doesn't like what you do so they try to ban it."

Caldwell concludes that even though he is best known as the author of those books "every one of my books is important to me. I say what I want to say, and I don't want to repeat myself. I put in a day's work for whatever it avails me. I don't believe in waiting for inspiration because it might not come and then I'd be lost."

("Afternoons In Mid-America" is published by Dodd, Mead.)

Piemaking company penalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An Oregon piemaking company has been ordered to pay a $10,000 civil penalty for allegedly selling short-weighted frozen fruit pies in California.

Mrs. Smith's Pie Co. of McMinnville agreed in a stipulated judgment Tuesday to maintain quality control.

Deputy City Atty. Marie Blits said the firm had fired three employes believed responsible for the short-weighting.

She said 10,158 frozen fruit and nut pies inspected were underweight by as much as 2⅝ ounces.

Under the agreement signed by Superior Court Commissioner Leo Rich, no wrongdoing or guilt was admitted.

West cashed his king of clubs and shifted to the jack of hearts. The Professor who sat South remarked, "I have a lot of ways to play this hand. Most will make so I had best bring in the slam."

There are lots of squeeze possibilities and at the very worst there is a two-way guess for the queen of diamonds. The Professor eleminated the guess quickly.

He won the heart with the ace and played three rounds of trumps while West chucked three clubs. Then he led a heart to dummy's king and ruffed a heart. When East showed out on that third heart lead, the Professor remarked, 'It's a sure thing now."

Then he simply cashed his last three trumps. West had to come down to three cards. One had to be the ace of clubs, the second a heart so he could only hold one diamond. Meanwhile, the Professor had chucked the jack of diamonds from dummy and he could throw either the queen of clubs or the last heart from dummy. It made no difference. They had done their work against West.

Then he led a diamond to dummy's king, took the sure-thing finesse against East's queen and had his slam as advertised.

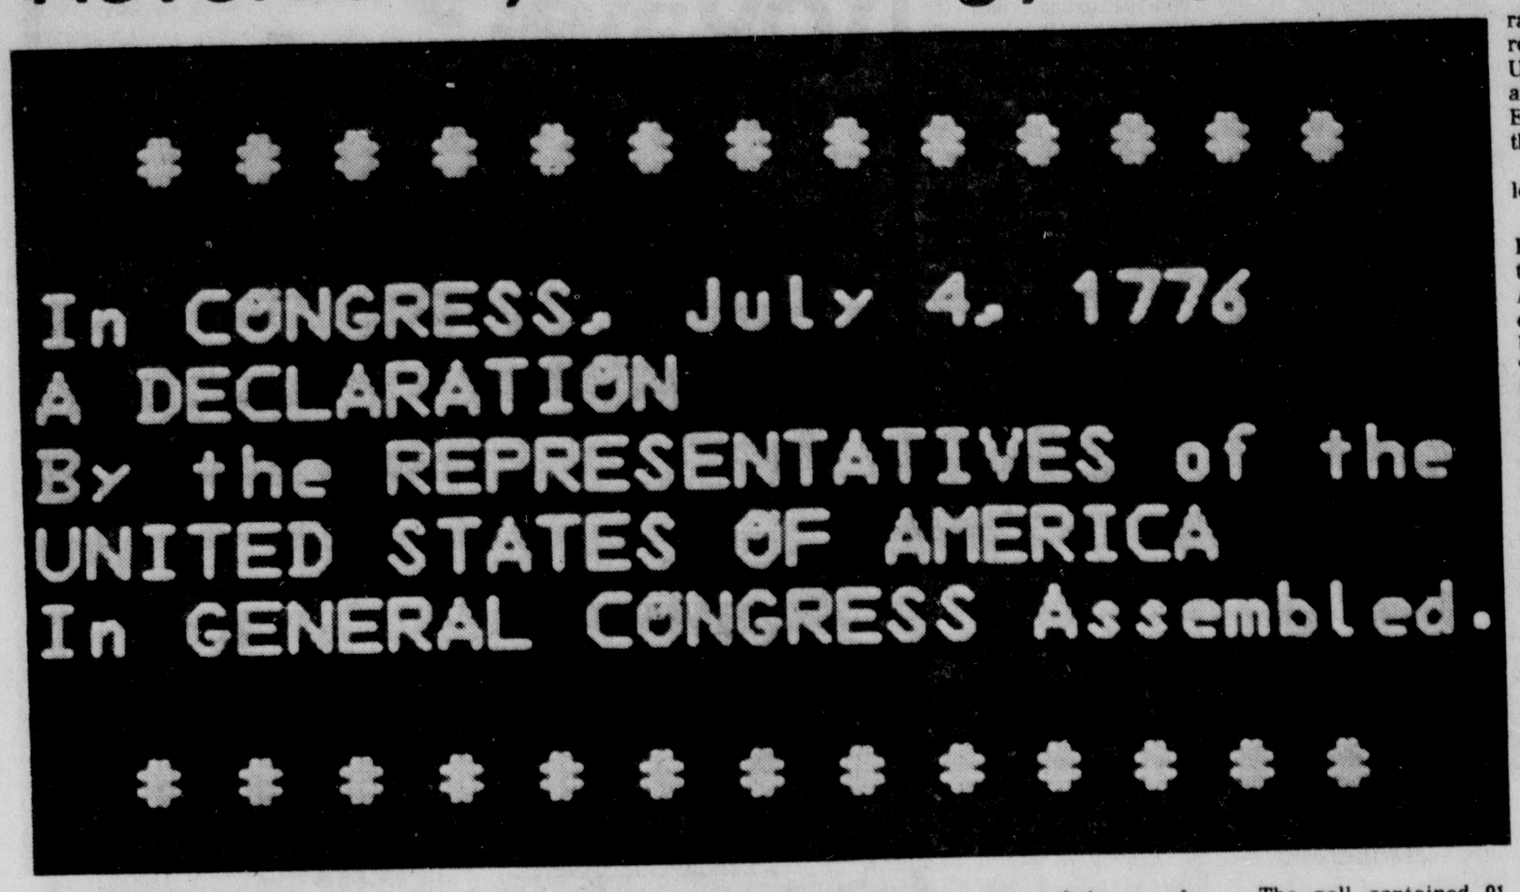
Revolution, technology top stories of Bicentennial



EDITOR'S NOTE: Generally speaking, the top U.S. stories since 1776, as chosen in a survey of editors and news directors, rank technological developments above political events.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The top story of two centuries of United States history is its oldest — the American Revolution — many editors and broadcasters agree.

The drafting of the Constitution was voted the second most important story since 1776 and the Civil War third in a poll of newspaper editors and radio-TV news directors.

There were 272 responses to the Associated Press poll, and 245 of them picked the Revolution among the top 20 stories of the last 200 years in America. The great majority voted it first.

World War II received the fourth highest total. The American moon landings were fifth, the development of the atomic bomb sixth, the 1929 crash and ensuing Great Depression seventh, the Watergate scandal and the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon eighth, World War I ninth, and Henry Ford, his Model T and the rise of the automobile tenth.

The remaining top stories chosen were: 11 — the assassination of president Abraham Lincoln, 12 — the development of television, 13 — the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, 14 — Thomas Edison and the electrification of the nation, 15 — Vietnam, 16 — Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, 17 — the changing role of women, 18 — the Wright brothers and the growth of aviation, 19 — the Louisiana Purchase, and 20 — the 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation.

Among the stories that received a considerable number of votes although not enough to be ranked in the top 20 were the establishment of judicial review of the Constitution by the Supreme Court under Chief Justice John Marshall; the waves of immigration into the United States in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries; the continuing agricultural revolution beginning with Eli Whitney's cotton gin, John Deere's plow and Cyrus McCormick's reaper; the development of the computer, and the emergence of the United States as a world power.

In general the editors were struck more by technological developments in American history than political events.

The Compromise of 1820, which for a time settled the admission of new slave and free states into the Union, received only two mentions. The Monroe Doctrine, a cornerstone of American diplomacy for more than a century, received a third fewer votes than the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania and the subsequent emergence of the petroleum industry.

The poll contained 91 topics. They ranged from the Teapot Dome scandals of the 1920s, Andrew Jackson's Presidency and the driving of the Golden Spike linking the nation by rail to America's leading role in the founding of the United Nations, prohibition and the rise of the suburbs. Editors were free to add their own choices.

A recapitulation of the leading stories follows:

1. THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION: Obviously this is the watershed of American history, the event that brought the United States into being. That the break with Great Britain was inevitable can be little doubted. But the rupture came when it did through a series of events: the growing impossibility of running a colony 3,000 miles away and running it as a source of raw materials when its own manufacturing, population and commerce were making America a power in her own right; mismanagement and corruption in London, at best a month's sail away from her colonies; the emergence of a singular group of leaders who could mobilize opinion towards independence and, finally, the impossible task of subduing a people on their own limitless homeland. The war ended with recognition of American independence by the Treaty of Paris in 1783, and George III then received John Adams as minister from his former colony.

2. DRAFTING THE CONSTITUTION: The Revolution over, it remained to set up a government, one that became a model for the centuries to come. It was a blend of political realities

Egypt elections often jeered at

CAIRO — (LENS) — Elections in Egypt are usually jeered at, particularly by Egyptians. At their worst they take the line of the referendum which in mid-September reinstalled President Sadat for a second six-year term by, it was unblushingly announced, 99.9 per cent of the votes cast.

The parliamentary elections held on Oct. 28 and Nov. 4 were about the best yet — which is not to say all that much. There was no question of the opposition winning or, indeed, of any straightforward opposition.

Even so, the campaign allowed a fair amount of healthy debate, incumbent members of the 350-seat assembly had to put up a fight (which most of them won), and it is being suggested, although it has yet to be proved, that the assembly will now be rather more influential than at any time since, or before, the 1952 revolution.

Back in March it was decided that the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's single party, should be divided into three wings, known by everybody as the center, the right and the left.

The center, led by the prime minister, Mamdouh Salem, represents an idealistic view of the government's present policy. It won the first contest effortlessly (and probably without much cheating), beating most of the independent candidates and massacring the right and left; it was confidently expected to repeat this performance at the run-off contest (between candidates who did not win an absolute majority the first time round) this week.

Its victory does not point to an unusual degree of contentment. On the contrary: the great majority of Egyptians find life an ever harsher struggle. They voted for the government for two main reasons. First, their traditional tendency to vote for the boss of their village or district. Second, the strongest appeals of the right (religion) and the left (Nasserism) were swallowed into the center's platform.

The center's stress on Koranic law as "the main source of inspiration from which legislation should derive" stole the right's thunder, turning it into a mere lobby for private enterprise; it also enabled the government's men to attack the left, unfairly but effectively, as atheists. The left campaigned on a Marxist program tinged with nostalgia for Nasser (never mind that Marxists spent much of his regime in prison) but was unable to push the nostalgia bit beyond the government's claim that it alone remains the true heir of the revolution and all it stood for.

A more lively assembly, and a new cabinet, are expected to lead to domestic legislation aimed at tempting in that elusive investment from the Arab oil states. No change is expected in foreign policy.

The election campaign was a genuine and experimental move towards freer speech. At the same time it was a pluralist gesture towards Egypt's new democratic friends in line, perhaps, with the fact that the Egyptian soldiers at the military parade in Cairo on Oct. 6 all wore brand-new West German uniforms.

Top stories—

in compromises between the smaller and larger states, and a wise division of powers among the executive, legislature and judiciary. This far-seeing document of great flexibility has been amended 26 times but still remains the law of the richest nation on earth.

3. THE CIVIL WAR: Almost 500,000 men died in the gravest crisis the Union has faced. It had been coming almost from the beginning as northern and southern states increasingly took issue over the practice of slavery. As the nation moved westward and new territories asked to be admitted, tensions became more acute, aggravated by the growing industrialization of the North while the South remained agrarian and political parties became increasingly regional. The election of Abraham Lincoln was the last straw to the southerners, and the states began to secede. This Lincoln would not allow and the shots fired on Fort Sumter soon after his inaugural ushered in four years of war that left the South decimated for decades.

4. WORLD WAR II: When Japanese planes attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941 a frustrated American sailor for want of anything else threw potatoes at the enemy aircraft. Within four years America's industrial might plus her fighting men had joined Britain and Russia in crushing the Axis powers of Germany, Japan and Italy. It was a war that changed the balance of the world, leaving the United States supreme among the free nations.

5. MAN ON THE MOON: For an eternity it had been there, inspiring poets, challenging scientists but not until July 20, 1969 did a human foot touch its dun gray dust. It belonged to American astronaut Neil Armstrong, whose landing with Edward Aldrin was the climax of a race into space with the USSR. Other moon landings followed.

6. ATOMIC ENERGY: In 1940, Prof. Enrico Fermi started the first successful chain reaction. Five years later, after a $2.5 billion research and development effort conducted in greatest secrecy, the world's first atomic bomb was exploded in a New Mexico desert. It was July 16, 1945, and the United States had led the world into an era of unimaginable terror and unpredictable hope.

7. THE DEPRESSION: The United States had known many panics, crashes and depressions, but none matched the one that began with the 1929 disaster on Wall Street when the boom of the '20s finally burst. Hunger, unemployment and suffering stalked the land The granary of the plains states became a dust bowl, and the country was not to recover until World War II returned full employment.

8. WATERGATE: It began with a bungled burglary, then grudgingly but relentlessly unveiled to reveal corruption on a scale that led to the highest seat in government, the Oval Office of the president. Before it was done, President Richard M. Nixon resigned in disgrace. So did Vice President Spiro Agnew, leaving the nation embittered and disillusioned.

9. WORLD WAR I: It was a last moment of innocence, the belief that a war that had Europe in flames could see America remain aloof. But German submarine warfare against American shipping broke President Woodrow Wilson's patience, and in 1917 the United States was in it. Her shipments of fresh, enthusiastic men turned the tide against Germany, but Wilson's idealism was shattered when Congress refused to join the League of Nations at the war's end. Nonetheless, America had emerged as an undisputed world power.

10. THE AUTO AND HENRY FORD: He wasn't the only car manufacturer, but Henry Ford's utilization of the assembly line, his revolutionary $5 a day wage and his plain black buggy set the nation off on a road the end of which, millions of cars and millions more miles of highways later, is nowhere in sight.

11. THE DEATH OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN: When John Wilkes Booth sent a bullet crashing into the skull of President Lincoln only days after Lee's surrender at Appomattox, he killed not only him but the best chance for an understanding, human reconstruction of the defeated Confederacy. Instead, radicals took over Congress, almost impeached President Andrew Johnson and set up bayonet rule in the South that left the region out of the mainstream for years to come.

12. THE TUBE IS BORN: The fundamental principles of television were known before the twentieth century, but its early years were as a laboratory curiosity, albeit one with a recognized potential. What that potential has become almost every American can now determine by sitting down and turning on his set.

13. THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY: The shots in Dallas in 1963 cut short an administration of great style and perhaps promise. Revisionists and some non-historians have been somewhat hard on Kennedy of late, but two questions are still debated: would we have entered a war in Vietnam, and did Lee Harvey Oswald, alone, murder him?

14. TURNING ON AMERICA: Thomas Alva Edison had but three months of schooling, which seemed to have sufficed. His developments of the light bulb, radio tube, movie camera and generating systems lit up America and left every citizen only a wall plug away from the world.

15. VIETNAM: It was America's longest war, its most divisive war and, by accepted yardsticks, the first it didn't win. It cost 45,000 battle deaths, $130 billion, sacrificed the ambitious social programs of the 1960s, drove President Lyndon Johnson from office, embittered a generation of young and left a widespread distrust of government.

16. THE NEW DEAL: In response to extraordinary circumstances President Franklin D. Roosevelt took extraordinary measures. Within hours of taking office in 1933 he closed the nation's banks to forestall panic. What followed was a blizzard of programs, some successful, some not, that redefined and greatly broadened the powers of the federal government along lines that exist to this day.

17. THE WOMEN: Two hundred years ago Abigail Adams reminded John not to neglect the women when talking of independence. Their battles, however, came later, culminating in 1920 with the right, finally, to vote. That seemed to end the struggle until the 1970s, when the Women's Lib movement began reminding the world that women were equal members of society entitled to equality in every aspect of life.

18. KITTY HAWK AND AVIATION: What Edison was to the dark and Ford to the horse, Wilbur and Orville Wright were to the ground. It would never be the same again. Their first flight at Kitty Hawk in 1903 eventually expanded man's horizons across continents and oceans.

19. THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE: This 1803 bargain by President Thomas Jefferson doubled the size of the United States at $15 million, or about 13½ cents an acre, for perhaps the best farmland in the world.

20. THE 1954 DESEGREGATION DECISION: Chief Justice Earl Warren led the U.S. Supreme Court in one of the most liberal periods in its history, his first landmark decision being Brown vs Board of Education in which segregated schools were declared unconstitutional. It began 20 years of struggle — and progress — for black rights.

Bar patrons didn't buy gun threat

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — The patrons at Harry's 420 Club just weren't in the mood to be robbed.

It was 7 a.m. and the bartender and three customers were engrossed in the "CBS Morning News" when a man entered the bar with a pistol and announced, "Don't anybody move."

The bartender, who identified herself only as a woman "over 39 and holding on," said one of the customers told the armed man, "Nobody is getting robbed while I'm watching the news."

"You think I'm bluffing?" asked the would-be robber.

"Yes, I think you are bluffing," came the reply.

The bartender said the armed man then cocked the pistol twice but still was unable to get the attention he wanted.

"You aren't taking this seriously," the man complained. He then ran out the door, "saying he was going to get his other two friends and come back," the bartender said.

A few minutes later, police arrested Ernest Burton, 32, of Cedar Rapids and charged him with attempted robbery.

Death rate

The Dominican Republic had the lowest accidental death rate, 18.9 per 100,000 population, in 1973, according to the World Health Organization. Austria had the highest rate, 78.6, and the United States ranked in the upper third with 55.2.

'Pappy' Boyington, misfits exploits proper portrait

SPOKANE, WASH. (AP) — World War II ace Gregory "Pappy" Boyington says his flock of Marine Corps "misfits" did all right for themselves.

Boyington, a Medal of Honor winner credited with shooting down 28 enemy aircraft in the South Pacific, and his unit of fighter pilots are subject of the television show "Baa Baa Black Sheep." The show depicts the exploits of men the Marine Corps branded misfits.

Boyington said many of his "black sheep" have been successful since the war. The unit's alumni includes two judges, seven lawyers, three physicians, seven career Marine Corps officers and "a couple" of stockbrokers, he said.

Boyington, 63, a Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, native, works as a technical consultant for the television series. He called the show "completely gratifying."

The series, based on Boyington's story of his war exploits, is about 90 per cent accurate, he said. "We're making dramatizations," said Boyington. "This is not a documentary."

Most members of his squadron who have seen the show were "delighted" with the production, he said, though some pointed out minor inaccuracies such as the use of different model aircraft and lights on runways.

Boyington said "there are some things we actually have to tone down" to make the fighter squadron's exploits suitable for television. Some salty language and derogatory terms for the Japanese were deleted, he said.

Some of Boyington's men gathered in Honolulu last month for a reunion, and there were those who suggested the show is more fantasy than fact.

"You think of history a lot differently when you're a distinguished grandfather and a peer in your community," said Boyington.

The retired Marine Corps officer said the series isn't out to glamorize combat. "We are not in the slightest promoting war," he said.

Boyington said he didn't fight in World War II under the illusion that it would be the war to end all wars. He said he joined the Marines as an aviation cadet in 1935 not to "shine shoes and polish brass, but because of the reputation of the Corps."

He admits his methods for running a fighter squadron were unorthodox. "This was our thing," Boyington said. "We ran the squad by our own rules."

Boyington said he's pleased the new television show appears to be a success. But he admits being in the limelight "isn't all fun. With everything good, there's a few things that are damn unpleasant."

Boyington said he thinks the show appeals to viewers because it "is timely. This is about a romantic era in aviation that will never happen again," he said.

At Willow

Alaskan capital site is chosen

JUNEAU — (LENS) — Alaskans have chosen the site of their new capital; it is Willow, not far from Anchorage and much nearer the center of population than Juneau, the present capital, which is down in the southeastern panhandle and inaccessible except by air or water.

The move to a valley where bear and moose still roam is timed for 1980 when money will be easier than it is this year. To build a new capital from scratch will not be cheap.

Alaska has been spending money lavishly; the present level of state expenditure, thanks to several oil-related taxes, is seven times what it was in 1969 just before the leases for Prudhoe Bay were signed with the oil companies.

All the $900 million it received for the oil leases has been spent; the oil (and the 20 cents for the state on each dollar's worth of crude) will not start flowing until next summer; there is still a risk that production may have to be reined in if the battle over how it is to be got to market is not solved by then.

This would be a real blow to the state, although its governor, Jay S. Hammond, would probably take it with equanimity. He is worried that the $1 billion a year expected by 1980 will be frittered away, with none being set aside for future needs and future generations.

Alaska's economic growth has been phenomenal since work on the pipeline began two and a half years ago. Income per head, which had been around $5,000 in 1973, had reached $7,440 by 1975, compared with $5,040 for the country as a whole, and the pace of growth is slowing down only now that the pipeline is 97 per cent complete.

A big price has been paid for this boom. The population has grown 20 per cent as work on the pipeline, paying around $1,000 a week, attracted about 25,000 men, and the growth of government, federal, state and local, attracted even more.

New business have sprung up to serve the pipeline. The rich pickings to be had brought con-men, prostitutes and gamblers who native Alaskans hope will follow the pipeline builders back to the "lower 48" states.

Crime has soared, and so have prices. These have always been high, but now beer costs $2 a bottle in some places, bread $1.13 a loaf, a hotel room $50 a night. Schools are overcrowded, housing is scarce and expensive.

Next year's breathing space will allow the state to consolidate its gains. But the economic plateau may not last long. Alaska has huge reserves of natural gas, 10 per cent of the American total, and demand for gas exceeds even that for oil

The next big battle will be over the route of the gas pipeline. Will it run along the oil pipeline to Valdez, a route that would give most employment to Alaskans and taxes to the state, but would require liquefying the gas before shipping it to California? Or will a pipeline be run through Canada to the Middle West, the route many experts prefer? A decision is hoped for by next spring.

Compulsive gamblers find 'GA' assistance

NEWINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Jack W. won't say whether gambling is good or bad for others. "All I know is that I can't gamble. It controls me."

After 30 years of playing the horses, Jack has joined Gamblers Anonymous. He had lost more than $60,000 and almost lost his family, he said. Since joining GA two years ago, he hasn't wagered a dime, but he takes it "one day at a time."

Jack is one of about 30 men who meet every Friday night in a church here to discuss their common problem — compulsive gambling. Gamblers Anonymous has 83 chapters nationwide and helps people in much the same way that Alcoholics Anonymous does.

Jack and others in his group think that the state's inroads into legalized gambling will increase the number of people who may have to join GA.

He says he has about two more years to go before he is out of debt.

"I didn't care about the money I lost. It didn't mean anything to me. I used to lie to my wife, borrow and steal to gamble," he said.

No matter how much he won, it wasn't enough.

"If I won $500 or $1,000, the bookie (illegal bet taker) would have it back in two weeks. There is never enough money for the compulsive gambler. You want to be a big shot. You dream all the time of hitting it big enough to own a big house, yachts, there's no end to it," he said.

He said the worst part of his compulsive gambling was what it did to his wife and three children.

"I denied them things they could have had," he said. "There were times when I would come home with no check at all. We had to really scrape by."

But he said his ordeal ended, at least temporarily, after he joined Gamblers Anonymous.

"My family is proud I owned up to my problem. My wife tried to keep my gambling from the kids. I think my daughter knew more about it than the two boys," he said.

Jack says he considers himself lucky. He said some members of his group went more than $150,000 into debt.

"Some lost their own businesses. Some lost their jobs because they stole from work," he said.

Recycled metals now widely used

NEW YORK (AP) — Recycled metals, equal in every way to their virgin counterparts, are likely to be found in almost any metallic product today, according to M.J. Mighdoll, executive vice president of the National Association of Recycling Industries.

And of all the metals, lead is the one that is most recycled, he says, adding that we now recycle about 820,000 tons of lead each year, or 50 per cent of our total supply.

"About 1 million tons are not recycled and, like millions of tons of other metals, these potential raw materials are now lost in the solid waste stream," he says.

Lead is one of the oldest metals, Mighdoll notes. The Hanging Gardens of Babylon were floored with sheets of lead to retain moisture; the Chinese used it to mint their first coins about 2000 B.C.; in ancient Greece gamblers loaded their dice with it, and the Romans used it for plumbing.

"In fact, the modern word comes from the Roman one for lead, 'plumbum,' which they applied to water spouts and conduits. Lead water pipes in a perfect state of preservation have been dug up in Pompeii, Rome and England," Mighdoll says.

"Lead is highly durable and was also widely used in construction in the middle ages. The restorers of the famous stained glass windows in Britain's Canterbury Cathedral are not using new metal, but are recycling the lead from the old framed panels."

Mighdoll explains that while most of our lead is now used in automobile batteries, it is also used in tetraethyl lead gasoline additives and for ammunition, caulking lead, cable covering, foil, die castings and lead type. While the electric battery may pose a threat to the future of lead usage, this metal is destined to play a prominent role in nuclear and electronic applications, he says.

"The average life of a lead battery is three years," Mighdoll says, "and if we were to recycle all of the lead which is now being dumped, we could manufacture some 80 million new automobile batteries, which, of course, can be recycled over and over again."

Rose Parade:

Students grow their own flowers for annual fest

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The rose is the flower that made the pageant famous.

However, for the sponsors of the annual Tournament of Roses Parade here on New Year's Day, flowers by just about any other name smell as sweet.

In fact, more than 100 varieties of flowers and other flora are used to decorate the 60 lavish floats that glide along the 5½-mile parade route. The 20 million blossoms used each year make the Rose Parade the largest floral extravaganza in the world.

Most of the flowers come from right in Southern California. However, exotic varieties of orchids and other flora are shipped by air from Hawaii and elsewhere just days, or even hours, before the parade to guarantee freshness and maximum beauty.

Southern California's best flower-growing areas are located in Lompoc (150 miles northwest of Los Angeles) and Encinitas (30 miles north of San Diego). During December, fields in both areas stretch for miles in colorful displays of chrysanthemums, carnations, gladioli and roses, most of which will be harvested for the parade.

Commercial growers are the primary suppliers, but a handful of organizations with floats in the parade also grow their own flowers. Among these are the students at the California State Polytechnic University campuses in nearby Pomona and in San Luis Obispo.

"Almost everyone knows how much work goes into flowering each of the floats during the last days before the parade, but most people have no idea how much work goes into growing the flowers," says Patty Thompson, a 19-year-old sophomore at Cal Poly Pomona.

An ornamental horticulture major, Patty is one of 65 student volunteers working on Cal Poly's 1977 entry. Her task is to supervise the growing of some 300,000 flowers.

"We never really know precisely how many flowers we need until we start putting flowers on the float," says Patty, who explains that the 1977 design is "Tons of Fun," a giant, comical elephant that roller skates down the street pulling her baby in a cart.

Most Rose Parade float flowers are ordered from commercial growers as soon as the float design is completed in early summer, thus insuring an adequate supply in the right sizes, shapes and hues. However, the Cal Poly students start growing their supply even before the parade theme for the year is announced.

"If we waited until our float was fully designed, we wouldn't have time to grow everything we need, so we plant what we think is an adequate supply of basic flowers each spring," says Patty. "Then, once our float is finalized, we plant any additional flowers if we think we'll be short. It's not scientific, but it works."

The Cal Poly students grow their flowers in the same way as commercial growers.

In the early spring, a crew of student volunteers canvasses Cal Poly's two huge flower fields to pick out and save the best stock plants left over from the previous year. Then, the ground is rototilled, fertilized, fumigated and formed into neat furrows, ready for planting.

Cuttings taken from the stock plants, along with others donated by local nurseries, are then planted in nursery flats in a gala planting party open to the entire student body. The flats are then transferred to high-humidity greenhouses, where they begin to root.

"Knowing when to transplant the starts (as cuttings are also known) from the greenhouse to the field is the tricky part," admits Patty. "If we transplant them too early, the flowers will bloom too soon; if we wait, they won't be ready for the parade."

To overcome the problem, Patty and her committee try to compute the exact number of growing days needed for each variety of flower. Based on carefully kept records, they consider such factors as the anticipated days of sunshine, moisture, temperature, insect conditions, etc. Generally, they've been right on target, Patty says.

In summer, the major tasks are weeding, staking of the plants and pinching. By early December the first flowers begin to bloom.

Finally, on the day after Christmas, the flowers are delivered to the float-building pavilion in Pasadena (Cal Poly's off-campus decorating site), where they are stored in tents until needed. Flowering usually begins with the hardier blooms, such as chrysanthemums, and continues right through New year's Day morning, when the most delicate flowers are added.

"We actually grow more flowers than we need," explains Patty. "If we wind up with too many pinks or not enough reds, we either trade them for something we need with the other float decorators, or sell the extras and use the proceeds to buy other flowers or materials," she adds.

The only flowers that the Cal Poly students don't grow themselves are roses. According to Patty, roses are just too difficult to raise, requiring a lot of care. It's easier to buy them.

Understanding

World college aim stressed

SINGAPORE (AP) — Fostering international understanding through education may be a difficult task but that is exactly what the United World College of South East Asia is doing.

The College is really equivalent to American secondary school and has students, ranging in age from 11 to 18, from 42 countries.

Originally known as St. John's School, it was built on 60 acres of land by the British Armed Forces in 1964. But when the British forces were withdrawn from this island republic in 1971, it became the Singapore International School, run by the International Chamber of Commerce.

Earlier this year it underwent its last name change. There are two other similar colleges, the United World College of the Atlantic in South Wales, Britain, and the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific in Vancouver, Canada. All three schools are largely organized by prominent businessmen, leading citizens and eminent politicians and diplomats, according to John Marshall, deputy headmaster of the United World College of South East Asia.

To help slow learners who need individual attention, the school maintains a student-teacher ratio of 12 to 1. The school has 1,250 students, including 300 boarders.

The Singapore government does not allow the school to accept Singapore citizens as students but there are no other limitations — except the tuition, which is about U.S. $1,908 a year (boarders pay about U.S. $3,870). Marshall explained that the entire school's expenditure was met by these fees.

About 20 per cent of the students are British, 10 per cent Australian, 7½ per cent each Malaysian and American. The others are from Japan, India, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, Indonesia, Taiwan, France, Germany and Holland.

Seattle mechanic repairs, rides ancient motorcycles

SEATTLE (AP) — Bill Meade is a self-admitted motorcycle nut, but you won't be seeing him tooling cross-country on a chrome-plated "hog."

If he is a wild one, it is of an earlier, slower, smokier, bumpier generation.

Meade repairs and rides ancient motorcycles.

Bang! Puff! Bang! Meade slips out of the driveway of his home in the sedate suburb of Edmonds. Sputtering down the street, he leaves round, billowy clouds of white smoke as the accumulated deposits of oil in his engine cylinders ignite.

He rides the 1919 Indian Scout slowly, since its old, thin tires almost go flat under a rider's weight.

He moves cautiously, since the worn leather helmet his mother made for him 46 years ago wouldn't meet today's legal crash helmet requirements.

He has about 35 motorcycles. The newest were manufactured in the early 1940s. The company that built his Indian Scout went out of business more than two decades ago.

His work space is mostly in two warehouses jammed with cycles in various stages of restoration. Stored on shelves or stuffed in boxes are thousands of spare gears, brake pads, light bulbs, magnetos, gas tanks and other unattached cycle parts.

Meade, a mock-up mechanic at the Boeing 747 plant, says part of his interest in preserving motorcycles is his mechanical inclination.

"And there's so much unpreserved history in old things of all kinds — I'm trying to preserve something for posterity. My interest just happens to be motorcycles," he says.

In a corner lie the rusty remains of a 1902 Thomas Autobi, which was nothing more than a bicycle frame with engine attached. Its drive chain was a bicycle chain wrapped in rawhide to give it traction.

Near the Autobi is one of Meade's restoration successes — a 1911 Wagner. It was a motorcycle whose designers decided to retain bicycle pedals so that an unfortunate rider who ran out of gas miles from home could always get back by foot power. (This kind of bike is making a comeback today as more and more states approve the use of so-called "mopeds," or bicycles with small motors and pedals.)

Meade's pursuit of rusting frames and corroded tailpipes gives him an intuitive sense about whether an area is "bike country."

Once he drove more than 100 miles on a tip that a family in Havre, Mont., might have a motorcycle he was interested in buying. A man there had a motorcycle frame which he said Meade could have, provided Meade paid the freight costs.

After retuning home, Meade made about 18 trips to the train depot, but the motorcycle never arrived. Later he got a letter saying the owner had died. He learned that another relative wanted to restore the motorcycle. Still later, the second man died, and Meade was able to secure the bike.

But it took four or five years and two deaths before he was successful, he adds.

Some of the older, low compression motorcycles were built to last longer than their modern-day counterparts, Meade says. They were built with "total loss" oil systems, meaning that every drop of oil put into the cycle eventually came out the tail pipe as exhaust.

That ensured that there always was fresh oil coating the engine parts, because the rider had to keep replacing the oil that burned up.

It also left the trail of telltale white puffs along the horizon.

And Meade is still leaving them.

Putt, putt, putt. ...

Yanez work acquired

DALLAS (AP) — The Meadows Museum of Southern Methodist University has acquired a painting by 16th-century Spanish artist Fernando Yanez de la Almedina. The painting of St. Sebastian is "one of the museum's most important acquisitions to date in terms of rarity and quality," said Museum Director William B. Jordan.

The work is a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Algur H. Meadows and the Meadows Foundation, Inc.

N.D. stuns Bruins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "There is no thrill to describe this one," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps after a gamble on freshman Rich Branning turned into an upset 66-63 college basketball victory over UCLA Saturday.

Branning scored four points in the last 45 seconds to hand third-ranked UCLA an unexpected and unusual loss in their own Pauley Pavilion.

"Why did I go with the freshman Branning in the final minutes? Because he is so juiced up, I have no worries. I have watched him and I like his leadership qualities," Phelps said.

UCLA Coach Gene Bartow blamed the loss on bad shooting.

"If you don't shoot well against Notre Dame, you're going to have problems," said the second-year UCLA coach. "They got a lot of breaks, expecially those in and out shots that went in for them and rolled out for us."

UCLA did not score during the last six minutes of the game, holding a 63-60 lead at that point.

The Bruins went into a stall offense with 2:17 remaining when David Greenwood was fouled by Dave Batton.

Greenwood missed the first of a one-and-one foul situation. Notre Dame recovered the rebound and Branning drove around Bruin guard Brad Holland for a layup, giving Notre Dame the lead, 64-63 with 45 seconds remaining.

Holland missed two shots in the final 12 seconds and Branning was fouled with one second remaining, converting both free throws for the three point win.

The upset victory was the first time Notre Dame has won at Pauley Pavilion after nine losses, none closer than 13 points. It was only the Bruins' fourth loss ever at Pauley, the first non-conference.

Don Williams led all scorers with 22 points, 16 in the first half, when he converted eight of 12 field goal attempts.

Marques Johnson led UCLA with 17, followed by Brett Vroman and Holland, with 14 each.

Branning scored only four points before his four-point effort in the last 45 seconds for a total of eight. Toby Knight hurt the Bruins early in the second half coming off the bench with 13 points.

After trailing at halftime 38-33, the fighting Irish came out gunning in the second half with three straight baskets by Knight, Bruce Flowers and Williams, to take a 39-38 lead after two minutes.

The Bruins answered with six points on two baskets by Vroman and one by Roy Hamilton to take a 44-39 lead before Notre Dame ran off 10 in a row.

With 14 minutes to play, the game see-sawed back and forth until UCLA led with six minutes to play, 63-62.

Saints shoot for consolation title

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

San Dimas High's basketball team advanced to the consolation finals of its own Tournament of Champions with its first win of the season Saturday afternoon in the Saints' gym.

The Saints (1-4) defeated South Hills, 65-54, to earn the right to play Dana Hills Monday at 5 p.m. for the consolation title of the seeded division of this year's expanded Tournament of Champions.

Dana Hills beat Damien, 58-53, Saturday evening to knock the Spartans (1-4) out of the tourney.

In night games, Victor Valley nipped El Dorado, 55-54, and Moreno Valley beat Mira Costa, 67-64.

Saturday's results
Championship semifinals
Victor Valley 55, El Dorado 54
Moreno Valley 67, Mira Costa 64
Consolation semifinals

Championship
Victor Valley vs. Moreno Valley, 9 p.m.

El Dorado will meet Mira Costa for third place Monday at 7 p.m. and Victor Valley and Moreno Valley will square off for the championship at 9 p.m.

All three of Monday's games will be played at the La Verne College Supertent.

San Dimas coach Bob Espinoza was gracious in his evaluation of South Hills' squad. "We caught them when they were flat, that's all," he said. "Friday night against El Dorado, Orvie LaVenture (of South Hills) couldn't miss from 20 feet out." (LaVenture scored 20 against El Dorado but only 10 against the Saints.)

"But I don't want to take anything away from our guys," continued Espinoza. "They hustled and I think we played pretty good defense."

Espinoza's squad will soon be strengthened by the addition of five football players, whose grid season ended just Friday night with a loss in the CIF 2A playoff semifinals. Mike Nunley, Steve Coulter, Don Hargett, Fred Carter and Marvin Rice are the gridders who will soon be playing basketball.

"Actually," said Espinoza, "the only reason I have sophomore Mike McDonald (the Saints' high scorer Saturday with 16) on the varsity is because we're short those five football players. But Mike's done so well (57 points in five games) I think we'll have to leave him on the varsity squad."

Guard Ken Muraki was next behind McDonald with 15 points, Vern Cofield had 13 and Mark Klein added 11.

South Hills' Paul Marron and Steve Hadder led the Huskies with 11 points each.

The Saints trailed 14-12 after a quarter, but scored eight straight points midway through the second period to take a 26-19 lead. San Dimas' margin was never smaller than three points after that, and at times was as large as 12.

The hosts really came alive during their 23-point fourth quarter, hitting 10 of 15 shots from the floor.

Damien also caught fire in the final period of its game, but it was too late for the Spartans.

After trailing Dana Hills 24-18 at halftime and 37-29 after three periods, the Spartans pulled to within five points of the Dolphins, 54-49, with a minute left.

But Dana Hills managed to keep the Spartans five points or more back the rest of the way.

Damien's Bill Duffy, the game's leading scorer and rebounder, scored 15 of his 25 points and caught six of his 14 caroms in the final period, when the Spartans put 24 points on the scoreboard.

Scott Bell complemented Duffy's performance with 13 points, but Scott Strohman's five was the next highest point total for the Spartans.

Turnovers proved fatal for Damien. The Spartans committed 16 of them in the first half and 27 for the game. They were whistled for traveling 11 times.

Victor Valley's Tony Anderson, a 6-foot-4 center, was certainly the individual star of the day.

He scored 37 of the Jackrabbits' 55 points, including a driving layup with four seconds left that gave Victor Valley the one-point win over El Dorado.

Leos come up short

By MARK GRIP
PB Correspondent

La Verne College coach Art Bias summed up the play of his Leopards Saturday night in their Supertent as "It was a lot of almosts for us tonight".

Almost it was as La Verne nearly came back to win a ballgame in which it was behind in most of the time, but time ran out on the Leos with Cal Baptist taking at 78-75 decision.

La Verne was down by as much as 14 points during much of the second half. Down by 14 with 6:32 left in the game, the Leos scored eight straight points to pull within six with 4:58 to go.

La Verne got to within four points (70-66) with 2:42 remaining, then the margin varied between four and six points until Stan Dill received two free throws with 15 seconds to play.

Dill missed the first and made the second to narrow the score to 76-73. Two seconds later, Lancer James Morbley sank two charities to put his team up by five.

After John Moon missed the front-end of a one-plus-one free throw situation with nine seconds left, Mike Winze scored with four seconds to play, but that was all she wrote as Cal Baptist (7-2) finished on top by three.

The Leos were down most of the first half and finished that stint behind, 32-25. Morbley scored 11 points in the first half to lead the Lancers, while Dill kept La Verne in the picture with seven points.

Morbley led all scorers with 25 points and grabbed nine rebounds while teammate Clay Brown scored 14 and hauled down 12 caroms. Rick Bauer added 12 points.

Dill came alive for 15 points in the second half to finish with 22 points. Dill also had an impressive slam dunk on a fast break lay-up in the second half that received a roar from the crowd.

Ulysses Ruffin was the only other Leo to reach double figures with 13 markers and also retrieved 11 misfires.

Friday night La Verne was routed by host Point Loma, 91-44. The Leos shot only 26% from the field, while Pt. Loma shot 60% from the floor. Ruffin led La Verne with 10 points and nine rebounds.

La Verne (1-5) will have a vacation due to finals, until December 22 when it plays at Ambassador College.

L.B. St. defeats Trojans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lloyd McMillian scored 23 points to lead Long Beach State to an 83-70 win over USC in the championship game of the Trojan Classic Saturday night at the Sports Arena.

The contest was not decided until the final three minutes as USC rallied to tie the score 59-59 with 9:45 remaining in the game after trailing for the first 30 minutes.

Long Beach State, now 5-0, led at halftime 40-33, but the Trojans rallied and tied the score on Mark Wulfemeyer's 25-foot jump shot.

USC, now 2-4, tied the score again on Greg White's basket with 8:04 remaining.

With the score 69-63 and 3:04 remaining Long Beach's Larry Hudson scored on a layin and Dale Dillon converted on a one-and-one free throw situation to give the 49ers a 73-64 lead.

The 49ers were able to hold onto their lead although USC closed the gap to 73-70 with 1:19 remaining.

McMillian, who made nine of 12 field goals and had eight rebounds, was selected the tournament's most valuable player.

Marv Safford was the Trojans' leading scorer with 18 points, hitting nine of 21 field goals.

Senior guard Wayne Burris scored 19 points to lead Butler University to a 72-61 win over Grambling in the consolation game of the tourney.

Butler led through most of the first half, although Grambling was able to jump out to a 22-19 lead with 10:56 remaining.

Butler regained its lead at 29-28 with 5:09 remaining in the first half when forward John Dunn made a layin.

The Bulldogs then built their halftime lead to 43-35.

Albert Davis of Grambling scored on a layin with 11:09 remaining in the game to pull within three points at 52-49.

But Dunn and Ed Thompson sparked Butler to a 59-51 lead with 7:41 remaining and the Bulldogs coasted on to victory.

Grambling's 6-3 guard Willie Simmons was the game high scorer with 21 points.

With the loss, Grambling is now 5-2. Butler is 3-4.

USF posts sixth straight triumph

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Sixth-ranked San Francisco fought off a game Utah team Saturday and grabbed a 91-81 triumph in the title game of the Utah Classic.

Tennessee downed Seton Hall 99-90 earlier for consolation honors in the tournament.

The victory was San Francisco's eighth straight win of the season. The winners were paced by Bill Cartwright, San Francisco's seven-foot center, who scored 21 points. Winford Boynes added 18 and John Cox 17 for San Francisco.

Buster Matheney topped the losers with 23 points, Jeff Judkins had 16 and little Jeff Jonas turned in a fine floor game for Utah and added 10 points.

Utah led 12-8 in the early going, but San Francisco quickly took charge and moved out to a 10 point lead at 37-27.

The host team wouldn't fold, however, and Matheney and Earl Williams sparked a rally that saw San Francisco fall behind at the half 44-43.

San Francsico moved out again in the second half and threatened several times to blow the game open, but Utah kept coming back and stayed in the game until the final minutes. Utah is now 3-2.

In the first game, Jackson scored 33 points and Grunfeld 37 to pace Tennessee, which led by as many as 25 points at one point. But Tennessee had to fight off a determined Seton Hall surge in the second half to get the victory. Bernard King added 19 points for Tennessee.

Glenn Mosley topped the Seton Hall scorers with 27 points, Randy Duffin hit 24 and little Greg Tynes came through with 18.

Tennessee led 57-32 toward the end of the first half, but Seton Hall cut the margin to 61-44 at the midway point. In the second half, Mosley and Duffin combined to trim the Tennessee lead to 69-58, but that was as close as Seton Hall got until Jay Boyle hit a pair of free throws at the end of the game for the final margin.

Bruins begin bowl practices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA's Bruins began a string of six practices Saturday for their Liberty Bowl contest against Alabama Dec. 20.

Coach Terry Donahue said the team had a good workout and that players hadn't become drastically out of shape since their last bout against USC three weeks ago.

The main focus during practice will be sharpening the team's timing, Donahue said.

Rebels hold off Aztecs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, hitting a phenomenal 42 of 44 free-throws but trailing from the floor 35 to 44 per cent, came from 13 points down Saturday night to defeat San Diego State 118-113.

The only man missing free throws was Lewis Brown.

The Aztecs, 1-5, stayed with the running Rebels, 4-1, point for point through the last part of the second half, despite fouling out four starters.

Leading scorer for Nevada-Las Vegas was Sam Smith with 34 points, followed by Eddie with 31. San Diego was led by Percy Gilbert with 25 points and Brian Frishman with 24.

Aztec starter Will Connelley, San Diego's leading scorer, was injured and did not play.

With 2:32 left to go, Las Vegas narrowly ahead 114-113 went into a stall, forcing Aztec fouls which were converted into points for the Rebels. Robert Smith hit two free-throws at 34 seconds. Then the Aztecs Dean Decker missed the first part of a one-on-one at 24 seconds and Jerry Brown at seven seconds fouled Owens, who hit both free-throws to clinch the lead.

Sabres dump Kings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gil Perrault and Richard Martin rifled in goals 1:26 apart in the second period to trigger Buffalo's Sabres to a 4-2 National Hockey League victory over Los Angeles Saturday night.

Perrault's 15th goal of the season, 8:29 into the middle period, spurred a three-goal assault by the Sabres and snapped a 1-1 deadlock.

Martin then notched his 15th of the season at 9:55, scoring an unassisted goal against Kings goalie Rogie Vachon to give Buffalo a 3-1 lead.

The Kings, who now have won only one of their 16 games, cut the Sabres lead 23 seconds later on Tommie Williams' 18th score of the season, a 20-footer which eluded Buffalo goalie Gerry Desjardins.

But defenseman Jerry Korab connected on a 10-foot backhand shot with 2:33 left in the period to stretch the Sabres' lead to 4-2. Gary Sargent blasted a 45-footer at 7:27 of the opening period to give the Kings a short-lived lead before Andre Savard tied it on a 10-footer.

The Sabres, who are in second place in the Charles Adams division made it two straight over the Kings and marked their seventh win in their last nine road games.

The Kings remained one point ahead of third place Pittsburgh in the James Norris division as the Penguins dropped a 6-3 decision to the New York Islanders.

The Sabres outshot Los Angeles 36-22.

Wolverines to train at Citrus

Michigan's Rose Bowl-bound Wolverines have chosen Citrus College as their West Coast training site.

Michigan will leave Dec. 20 for Los Angeles, and begin daily practice sessions at the Owls' football facility the next day.

Michigan is slated to hold 10 daily practices at Citrus, which has been used as a training site for the Rose Bowl by Ohio State in prior years.

The Wolverines under head coach Bo Schembechler begin a series of six practice sessions at their Ann Arbor campus Monday.

Waves win tourney

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Art Allen and Flintie Williams each shot for 18 points Saturday night to give Pepperdine a 73-64 basketball victory over South Alabama in the Pepperdine Classic doubleheader.

In a second game, Fullerton State easily outscored Azusa Pacific 64-35.

Pepperdine struggled through the first half for a slight halftime edge at 32-30. The strain continued until late in the second half when Pepperdine pulled away to avert its first loss of the season.

Six-foot-2 sophomore guard Michael Knight helped the leading scorers with six assists, pleasing a home crowd that was ruffled by Pepperdine's stalling tactics in the first half.

Leading scorers for South Alabama were Gary Reese and Keith Dean with 14 points each.

Pepperdine, which won both nights in the Classic, is now 4-0. South Alabama is 3-4 after two disappointing nights.

Azusa, which fared poorly both nights, is now 2-5. Fullerton boosted its record to 4-2.

Haden injured in Ram victory

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Quarterback James Harris, who hadn't been getting much playing time lately for the Los Angeles Rams, wound up getting the game ball Saturday night.

Harris replaced the injured rookie Pat Haden midway through the first quarter and guided the Rams to a 20-17 National Football League victory over the Detroit Lions in their regular season finale.

"He did a hell of a job," Rams Coach Chuck Knox said of Harris, who completed 10 of 17 passes for 113 yards — including a 27-yard touchdown pass to Harold Jackson that began a 17-point, third-quarter Los Angeles scoring binge.

"The second half is a tribute to the players," Knox said. "It shows the pride they have to come back like they did. It will help in the playoff."

The Rams open their playoffs at Dallas next weekend.

Knox said he didn't know how serious the injury to Haden was, but that X rays would be taken today.

In the opposite locker room, Detroit Coach Tommy Hudspeth said: "I can't fault anybody's effort. We played a good football game. You just can't make mistakes like we did in the second half against a good football team and expect to win."

Los Angeles drove 65 yards in 12 plays after the second-half kickoff, with Harris passing to Jackson for the touchdown. Soon afterward, linebacker Isiah Robertson intercepted a Joe Reed pass to set up a 32-yard field goal by Tom Dempsey.

With just two seconds left in the quarter, Cullen Bryant scored on a three-yard run for the Rams on the first play after linebacker Jim Youngblood intercepted another Reed pass and returned it 26 yards.

The Lions took a 3-0 lead on a 19-yard field goal by Benny Ricardo after an 84-yard return of the opening kickoff by rookie James Hunter.

Dempsey tied it with a 35-yard field goal but Reed, who hadn't played in seven games except to hold for placekicks, led Detroit to a pair of touchdowns, one on his own four-yard run late in the first quarter and the other on a nineyard pass to Charlie Sanders late in the second period.

Reed replaced Greg Landry at quarterback for Detroit in the closing minutes of the first quarter when the Lions were unable to generate much offense.

His first play was a 57-yard pass to Ray Jarvis that put Detroit at the Rams' five-yard line. Three plays later Reed scored his touchdown.

Sanders' touchdown, the 30th of his career, was his third straight catch in a 53-yard, three-play drive that began after Lem Barney intercepted a Harris pass and returned it 26 yards.

Los Angeles, which finished the regular season with a 10-3-1 record, stymied Detroit's offense in the second half while the Rams' second-string offense moved the ball well.

Detroit's last chance came on the game's final play when Reed's 48-yard bomb was intercepted in the end zone by cornerback Rod Perry.

The Lions wound up with a 6-8 record, their worst since 1968 when they were 4-8-2.

As the game ended, a spokesman for the Rams said Haden's knee injury appeared serious. Haden, an NFL rookie from Southern California who previously played in the World Football League, became the Rams' regular quarterback in the ninth game of the season.

All-Star game in San Diego

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National League President Chub Feeney announced Thursday that the 1978 All-Star Game will be played in San Diego.

Originally, the NL had planned to host the game in Montreal but final lease arrangements for Olympic Stadium have not been completed by the Expos and the league decided to shift to San Diego instead.

The 1977 All-Star Game will be played in New York's Yankee Stadium.

Le Roy Boys' has 5-2 year

Le Roy Boys' Home, located in La Verne, enjoyed a 5-2 season for fifth and sixth grade football.

John Potter led the team with six touchdowns with Cole Huckelby tallying four plus 320 yards. Defense honors were shared by Willy Robertson and Randy Pickens.

Lou Holtz accepts Arkansas' offer

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Lou Holtz accepted the job as head coach at Arkansas Saturday by saying his decision to leave the New York Jets was a difficult one, but that he would not look back.

"That's why the Lord put eyes in the front of your head instead of in the back," Holtz said.

Holtz, 39, was given a five-year contract. Athletic Director Frank Broyles said Holtz would have the option to renew the contract each year.

Broyles said Holtz would receive the maximum salary allowed by state law, $36,000 a year. Steps are expected to raise his salary.

Holtz is succeeding Broyles, whose resignation was accepted Saturday by the university's board of trustees. Broyles resigned after 19 years as head coach. He began serving as athletic director in 1973, and will continue in that post.

Moments after the board accepted Broyles resignation, it hired Holtz.

Holtz emphasized during a news conference that he was Lou Holtz and not Frank Broyles.

Holtz had asked how often he and Broyles had talked about the Arkansas job.

"The job was never really discussed," Holtz said. "He (Broyles) said if I intended on getting back in college coach he would recommend me for the best job in America. He never mentioned Arkansas."

Holtz said a team "cannot win without discipline." He said a coach must know the difference between harassment and discipline.

"Team rights will always surpass individual rights," he said. "I hope those who play for me remember me as a fundamental coach and a realist."

He said the past week had been traumatic. On Wednesday, Holtz announced that he had four years left on his Jets contract and would honor that commitment. Thursday, he announced, "Lou Holtz is not made for professional football," and resigned.

"It's important to know yourself, what you enjoy," Holtz said Saturday. "I'm a teacher, I enjoy teaching. Recruiting doesn't bother me in the least.

"It was not the New York Jets versus Arkansas. It was a question of Lou Holtz staying in football."

His relations with the Jets management, he emphasized, were good.

Holtz said he was "not completely happy deep down inside" because of the pain he inflicted on his Jets friends supporters.

Knights claim tourney title

Ontario Christian High claimed the title in the Western Christian Basketball Tournament Saturday night.

The Knights beat Valley Christian 60-53 in the finals. In another tourney result, Bosco Tech routed La Verne Lutheran, 81-51, for the consolation crown.

In action in the Riverside Christian Tourney, American Christian won third place with an easy 53-34 romp over Victor Valley Christian.

The Knights, in the wake of their tourney title, placed three men on the all-tourney team. Hank Bouwman was picked as the tourney's most valuable player, while Jim Berkompas and Steve McCrady also were selected to the team.

Berkompas led the way Saturday with 20 points vs. Valley Christian. Bouwman added 11 points and 18 rebounds, while Knight center Pete Verhoeven had 13 points and 16 boards.

John Wiersma led Valley with 18 points, and also made the all-tourney team.

OCHS rallied from a 15-11 first quarter deficit to post the win.

La Verne Lutheran, playing without high scorer Greg Guenther, could do little right against Bosco Tech. Tech led 40-13 at the half.

La Verne Lutheran is now 4-2 on the year, while Ontario Christian is 4-1.

American had little trouble with Victor Valley, as Terry Balliet led the way with 18 points. American is now 2-2 on the year. Host Riverside Christian won their own tourney with a win over Liberty Christian.

Lutheran will return to action Monday with an Arrowhead League game vs. Orange Lutheran at Orange. Ontario Christian will open play in the Notre Dame (Riverside) Tourney on Wednesday, while American will be at home Thursday vs. St. Baptist of Canoga Park.

Knights nab grid honors

Four members of the Ontario Christian football team made the All-Olympic League football squad's first unit.

Offensive linemen Sherwood Ringling and Albert Rollema along with tight end Pete Verhoeven and defensive back David teVelde made the first team.

Hank Bouwman, Greg DeVries, Tom Lanting and Jim Berkompas were second-team picks for the Knights.

L.A. Lutheran's Willie Phillips was chosen as the Olympic League's Most Valuable Back while Lutheran's Anthur Scott was the Most Valuable Lineman.

Stags, 'Hens lose cage tilts

The Claremont-Mudd and Pomona-Pitzer basketball squads ran into some rugged competition Saturday night, as both local squads suffered losses.

Claremont-Mudd was beaten by visiting Point Loma by a 87-69 margin, while Pomona-Pitzer was downed by host Westmont by a 85-65 count.

The Stags, now 1-6 on the season, stayed with powerful Point Loma for most of the first half. However, Point Loma (now 6-1 on the year) pulled away to an eventual 18-point lead

'Gades win JRB

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

PASADENA — Bakersfield College won the mythical National JC Championship Saturday.

A disappointing turnout of 21,200 saw the host Renegades roll to a convincing, 29-14, victory over Ellsworth of Iowa Falls, Iowa.

Bakersfield finished its season with an 11-1 record while Ellsworth wound up 9-1.

Quarterback Steve Denman started off with a hot hand. The 6-2, 190-pound sophomore from Techapi completed his first 10 passes, three of them for touchdowns to get the Renegades off to a 21-0 lead.

The first was a 20 yarder to tight end Brant Tungent. That completed a nine-play, 68-yard drive that took up the first 4:05 of the game.

The second was a 64-yard bomb. After Denman had passed eight yards to wingback Mike Georgino at the Bakersfield 36, he hit wide receiver Chris DeFrance at the Iowa 30 and DeFrance outran defensive back Leonard Fagen to score the TD and cap a 72-yard, two-play explosion.

In the second quarter Denman connected with DeFrance again, this time for a 30-yard TD play. That capped a five-play, 65-yard drive.

Denman finished the game with 12 of 17 completions for 216 yards and the three TDs.

Ellsworth got on the board with 5:22 left in the half. It was a bizarre drive that actually went 80 yards but twice saw Ellsworth forced to punt only to get the ball back on a roughing the kicker penalty and a personal foul. The 15-yard penalties allowed the Panthers to keep the ball first on their own 35 and then on Bakersfield's 44. On the first play after the second infraction, Maurice Jackson ripped off a 44-yard TD run.

A Bakersfield fumble gave Ellsworth the ball at the Renegades' 47 with 1:29 left in the half. Six plays later Walter Grant passed 13 yards to wide receiver Greg Smith for the score.

It was 20-14 at the half, but Ellsworth had lost 6-3, 270-pound Reggie Hall, its best offensive lineman with an ankle injury.

The only score in the second half was Scott Dye's 23-yard field goal for Bakersfield in the third quarter, a JRB record. On another bizarre twist, Dye had just booted a 30-yarder. But a personal foul was called on Ellsworth and a Bakersfield player mistakenly accepted the penalty thinking it would give the Renegades a first down. But they still had a fourth and three and Dye still had to kick.

The Renegades marched to the Ellsworth five in the fourth quarter but didn't score as a Denman pass went incomplete on fourth down.

"I goofed," admitted Collis. "I thought we could score. I should have kicked a field goal. But I was afraid they would get good field position after our kickoff and I didn't want that. On the double field goal situation, I should have had a captain on the field. I didn't and another player had to make the decision.

BB meetings make history

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball's week-long winter meetings produced only sporadic trading action but did set in motion a scenario that could radically alter the look of the game within the next two years.

Under serious consideration are proposals that would create three divisions in each of the two leagues, an arrangement that would mirror the one used by the National Football League. The playoffs then would include the winners of each division plus a wild card team, creating an elimination-type tournament to produce the World Series opponents.

The meetings also almost certainly assured the return of major league baseball to Washington, D.C. through one of several methods. Baseball would lead you to believe that it prefers a plan whereby the Baltimore Orioles would play a portion of their games in the nations's capital. But that idea has been kicking around for some time and is unlikely to be the final solution to the Washington dilemma.

That's why there are two contingency plans available. Both involve the National League where any new Washington team will wind up. One agrees in principle to the transfer of an existing NL franchise to Washington and, if that does not materialize, the other clears the way for an American League team to switch to the NL and move into the nation's capital.

A switch of a team from one league to another would be unprecedented in modern baseball and if it happens, it also would create two 13-team leagues and inter-league play, another radical departure from tradition.

But tradition doesn't seem to matter as much today in baseball as it once did. The development of the free agent escape hatch has left players as virtual transients, free to move elsewhere.

Oakland owner Charles O. Finley, who lost six of his best players through that route, shook up the convention by divulging the contract terms their new clubs had given ex-A's Joe Rudi, Don Baylor, Sal Bando, Bert Campaneris, Gene Tenace and Rollie Fingers. The numbers added up to an awesome $9.2 million.

There were 14 deals involving 40 players completed at the meetings. And every time a deal was made, one of the first questions asked was whether the participants are signed for next season. Even when they were, that didn't guarantee delivery.

There was, for example, the strange George Scott affair.

Traded by Milwaukee along with outfielder Bernie Carbo to Boston in exchange for first baseman Cecil Cooper, Scott balked at the deal, demanding that the Red Sox renegotiate his contract. He had already signed for 1977.

The Sox were willing to renegotiate, but Scott's agent, Gary Walker, told them he would recommend that the slugging first baseman reject their final offer. At that point, it seemed, the deal would be voided. But then Scott ignored his agent's advice and agreed to terms. Does Waker still get 10 per cent in that case?

For Scott and Carbo, the trade meant a return to Boston. Two other deals also restored players to their former teams. Veteran designated hitter Rico Carty returned to Cleveland in a swap that sent catcher Rick Cerone and utilityman John Lowenstein to the expansion Toronto Blue Jays, and third baseman Ken Reitz, traded from St. Louis to San Francisco at these meetings a year ago, returned to the Cardinals in a deal that brought right-hander Lynn McGlothen to the Giants.

Some of the week's other significant trades included:

—Atlanta acquiring outfielder Jeff Burroughs, a former American League Most Valuable Player, from Texas for outfielders Ken Henderson and Dave May, pitchers Carl Morton, Roger Moret and Adrian Devine and an undisclosed amount of cash.

—San Diego getting outfielder George Hendrick from Cleveland for outfielder John Grubb, catcher Fred Kendall and shortstop Hector Torres.

—Pittsburgh obtaining reliever Grant Jackson from Seattle for infielders Craig Reynolds and Jimmy Sexton.

—Kansas City trading infielder Jamie Quirk, outfielder Jim Wohlford and a player to be named later to Milwaukee for pitcher Jim Colborn and catcher Darrell Porter.

Some clubs tried to deal right up until the Friday midnight PST deadline. Pittsburgh spent most of the night in the lobby and finally swung one of the week's biggest trades, acquiring pitchers Rich Gossage and Terry Forster from the Chicago White Sox in exchange for outfielder Richie Zisk and minor league pitcher Silvio Martinez.

Some teams tried, but missed. The New York Yankees, who came here searching for a shortstop were talking right to the end before leaving without any new faces.

Others who went home empty-handed were the New York Mets, Baltimore Orioles, Detroit Tigers, California Angels, Oakland A's and Cincinnati Reds.

Shavers stops Williams

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Earnie Shavers staggered on the verge of a knockout in the 10th and final round Saturday before staging a two-fisted comeback that stopped Roy Williams 14 seconds before the end of their fight.

Ahead on points and with the possibility of a March title fight against Muhammad Ali, Shavers took punishment in the ninth round and in the 10th Williams had the ranking heavyweight reeling in the nationally televised bout.

Referee Buddy Basilico gave Shavers a standing eight count, which goes as a knockdown.

Williams, of Philadelphia, tried to finish off his foe, but caught a left and a right that put him against the ropes. When Shavers continued to land punches and Williams was obviously hurt, Basilico gave him a standing eight count.

As the referee reached eight, Williams collapsed in a heap and the fight was over.

In a 10-round light heavyweight bout, Mike Rossman, 166½, of Turnersville, N.J., won a split decision over Mike Quarry, 175, of Orlando, Fla.

"It was sweet revenge," the 21-year-old Rossman declared, since he had lost a split verdict to Quarry in September, 1975.

In the heavyweight fight, the 6-foot-4 Williams, who weighed 231, used his hands and long arms primarily for defense against the hard-punching, 210-pound Shavers.

The action was so slow that the crowd of 2,610 in the Aladdin Hotel's Theater for the Performing Arts booed lustily. By the sixth round, however, Williams had sufferred a cut inside his mouth and his right eye was bruised. Until the ninth, it appeared Shavers would win easily.

Then Williams staged his comeback, but even after the ninth the sixth-ranked challenger from Warren, Ohio, was ahead on all scorecards.

As manager Tony Stazzeri hollered to Williams, "We need the big money, Roy," the big fellow began getting Shavers into trouble. Midway in the 10th it appeared the 31-year-old Shavers wouldn't make it through the final round.

Then came the unexpected ending that put Shavers record at 54-5 and brought him his 52nd knockout. Williams, who never had been stopped previously, suffered his sixth defeat in 27 fights.

Steelers, Vikes capture key wins

MIAMI (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings stopped Miami with a strong first-quarter goal-line stand, then went on to thrash the Dolphins 29-7 Saturday behind three touchdown passes to Sammy White to clinch the home-field advantange in next weekend's playoffs.

"I'm sure it had a lot to do with the game," said defensive end Carl Eller, who stood tall as the Vikings stopped Miami seven times within the seven-yard line in the early first-period series. Four plays came inside the two.

"I don't know if it took anything out of the Dolphins, but it made us feel a lot better, especially after the offense took over," Eller added.

Quarterback Fran Tarkenton said he found the ball "as close to the goal line as it could be without touching" when he began a 99-yard-plus scoring drive. He said he took advantange of double-coverage on Ahmed Rashad as he made White his primary target, including on a nine-yard pass for the game's first touchdown.

"It seemed they were more concerned about Rashad," said Tarkenton. He had gone to Rashad 51 times in previous games for 693 yards, compared to 42 thows for 786 yards to White.

"They were leaving me one-on-one (with conerback Jeris White) most of the time," said White, who caught a 36-yard scoring pass later in the first half.

Fred Cox, who missed his first two conversion kicks and a 24-yard field-goal attempt, connected on a 30-yard field goal just before halftime for a 15-0 lead.

The Vikings, finishing the regular season with an 11-2 record and the National Footnall Conference's Central Division title, will host the NFC's wild-card team — either Washington or St. Louis — next week. Washington can grab the wild-card spot by beating Dallas on Sunday.

A seven-yard touchdown pass from Yarkenton to White and a one-yard scoring run by Brent McClanahan turned the game into a rout at 29-0 in the third quarter.

Miami finished with a 6-8 record, the first losing season in 14 years of coaching for Don Shula.

HOUSTON (AP) — Pittsburgh's playoff-clinching 21-0 victory over Houston Saturday will go into the record books as a regular season National Football League game, but to the Steelers it was just another playoff game — their ninth in a row.

"I'm very proud of this team for the way they've played one game at a time," Steelers Coach Chuck Noll said. "Since we started our winning streak, every game has been a playoff."

The Steelers' victory was their ninth straight after losing four of their first five games and it clinched the American Football Conference's Central Division title. It also gave Pittsburgh a shot at an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl title.

Terry Bradshaw, after missing two games with a wrist injury, hit Lynn Swann with a 21-yard touchdown pass, ran one yard for another TD and led interference on Franco Harris' 11-yard scoring jaunt.

Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain defense did the rest. With large doses of help from Houston's inept offense and shoddy punting, the Steelers allowed the Oilers only 157 total yards.

"Pittsburgh is a super football team," Houston Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips said. "They did the impossible. You will remember that I said when they were 1-4 they were anything but out of it. I think it's probably the biggest comeback in the history of pro football."

Bradshaw, starting for the first time in three games, hit Swann between two Oiler defenders at the Houston one-yard line and Swann dipped into the end zone with 2:59 left in the first half.

The Steelers offense, which had stymied by a rugged Oiler defense, got the scoring chance when cornerback Mel Blount intercepted a pass by Dan Pastorini and returned it 28 yards to the Houston 13.

Franco Harris put the Steelers ahead by two touchdowns in the third quarter on an 11-yard run, with Bradshaw throwing a decisive block. Harris started to his right, then suddenly reversed to the left. Bradshaw took out two potential tacklers.

The Steelers drove 79 yards on 10 carries in the fourth quarter, with Bradshaw diving the final yard to end the Oiler season with a 5-9 record. Pittsburgh finished the regular season at 10-4.

CIF guide on sale

If you're a statistical buff, collector of sports memoirs or just plain enjoy reading about the prep interscholastic arena, then a copy of the new CIF Southern Section's 1977 Press Guide & Record Book is a must

The 1977 edition has expanded from 68 to 102 pages, containing records and new information on all 23 sports offered by the CIF Southern Section for Boys and Girls' competition, dating as far back as 1913.

Needless to say, as with any such venture, the CIF office has uncovered a number of records buried but never reported since the last edition of two years back. The CIF has also increased the number of record categories in other sports for the most comprehensive publication in its history.

Copies are available at $2.50 each, plus postage, by writing the CIF-SS Office and enclosing a check or money order as follows: Mailing under third class is $3.25, while first class mailing is $3.95. Make your check or money order payable to the CIF-SS, P.O. Box 488, Artesia, California 90701.

Play Better Golf–with JACK NICKLAUS

Yanks welcome free agents

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — New York Yankee outfielder Oscar Gamble says he is happy to see pitcher Don Gullett and outfielder Reggie Jackson joining the American League pennant winners, and feels their huge salaries will not cause dissension on the team.

Gullett, a left-handed pitcher, joined the Yankees from Cincinnati while Jackson, a slugging outfielder, came to New York from Baltimore. Both played out option years and signed with New York for reported multi-year contracts which made them millionaires.

"I'm glad to see them coming to New York," Gamble said. "Reggie is a great baseball player and so is Gullett. They are both going to be welcome additions to the team. You're always happy to see people of their caliber come to your team.

"I don't think it will cause any dissension or jealousy among the players. After all, everybody in baseball has the right to play out their option and become a free agent.

"You've got to get what you can for yourself. A lot of players are getting rich doing that. You can't blame them or resent them."

Gamble, who lives in Montgomery during the off-season, is—like Jackson—a left-handed power hitter who plays right field, a position where the Yankees have an abundance of talent.

Carlos May, Gene Locklear, Ron Blomberg and newcomer Terry Whitfield all are lefthanded hitters who can play the position, and right-handed hitters Lou Pinella, Elliot Maddox and recently-acquired Jimmy Wynn also can play there.

With all that talent in right field, it would appear that someone is going to have to move on. Gamble feels a trade for a shortstop is imminent.

"It's doubtful that any of us would be able to break into the outfield at one of the other positions," the 27-year-old veteran said. "(Mickey) Rivers is one of the best in baseball in centerfield and I don't think anyone is going to move Roy White out of left.

"Of course, there's the designated hitter role and someone is going to have to fill that. I don't know about Blomberg; he didn't play at all last season.

"It looks to me like there is going to be a trade. I'd imagine they'd go for a shortstop. I'm not worried about the possibility of a trade. I feel like I fit into the Yankees' plans and that I'll be in New York next summer."

'Skins, Cards need wins

By Associated Press

Pick a card.

There's only two left, National Football League-wise, and both are wild.

The Washington Redskins and St. Louis Cardinals are fighting for the National Conference wild card. Over in the American Conference, Baltimore and New England are doing similar battle, with one major difference.

In the NFC, whichever team gets the card also gets a playoff berth while the other team says farewell to its 1976 playing time. In the AFC, the winner, in effect, comes up a loser. That is, whichever team gets the wild card is the one which failed to wind up with the East Division title. Both the Colts and Patriots have already been guaranteed a playoff berth.

Of all four teams, Washington undoubtedly has the toughest task. The Redskins are playing in Dallas. The Cowboys, at 11-2 are the winningest team in the NFC. The other three play losers—St. Louis at the New York Giants, Baltimore hosting Buffalo and New England at Tampa Bay.

In today's other games it's Cincinnati at the New York Jets, Cleveland at Kansas City, Seattle at Philadelphia, Green Bay at Atlanta, Denver at Chicago, San Francisco at New Orleans and San Diego at Oakland.

Dallas safety Cliff Harris finds himself in a quandry over today's game. If Washington loses, it helps the Cards. If Dallas loses, it helps Washington. "It galls me to have to do a favor for either one of them," Harris says.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry views the struggle as a "war of the specialty teams ... We beat Washington with field position and our kicking game the first time ... I think we'll respond to the challenge. They will be playing tough because they know a loss means they'll be sitting home at Christmas. Just playing Washington is the only incentive we need."

The Cards have an extra day of rest heading into New York. They beat Baltimore eight days ago on national television. And they also have in their memories the close call of their Oct. 3 game, when they had to fend off the Giants' last-ditch charge to win 27-21.

The Bills have literally been a one-man gang lately with O.J. Simpson running wild—and Buffalo going nowhere in the process. In their first meeting this season, the Colts belted the Bills 31-13. Tampa Bay, meanwhile, has its last chance to avoid becoming the first team in the history of the NFL to lose all 14 games its first year, exlipsing the frustration level set by the Cowboys in their first year of 1960, when they went 0-11-1.

Tourney needs softball teams

The Claremont Recreation Department and the All-American Umpire Association will host the first holiday classic slo-pitch softball tournament, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 18 and 19 at Cahuilla Park.

The tournament will be open, double-elimination, and have a 16-team bracket. Only West End and Pomona Valley teams may enter.

Entry fee is $65 a team, due by Tuesday, Dec. 14 by 5 p.m.

Additional information may be obtained by phoning Jack Medrano at 624-4531, extension 271.

Claremont loses Ron Skaggs

By PHIL Roche
PB Staff Writer

Well, one of the best high school golf coaches in these parts won't be running the Claremont High School program this year. He's Ron Skaggs, who has turned out some of the finest players and teams in Southern California year after year.

When you mention Claremont golf, you automatically mean success and class. Skaggs, an outstanding organizer, devoted untold hours to his golf team, and every other coach around here had to hustle just to stay a few paces behind him.

I remember he used to charter an airplane to fly his team to desert tournaments. It wasn't really a tournament either if Skaggs and his team weren't there. The list of championship players he turned out is too long to name. I recall that one year the number 1 player at UCLA was Jim Porter, while the best player at USC was Jon Fiedler, both Claremont players.

Claremont High then is looking for a coach. The job pays $600, but Skaggs' record is tough to beat.

In a thrilling 36-hole match Don Donahue defeated one of the Southland's best amateurs, Larry Bouchey, to win the club championship at Green River Golf Club recently.

Donahue, a runnerup on three occasions, won the match with an 8-foot putt on the 35th hole. Donahue, who plays every Sunday, is greens superintendent at Lawrence Welk Country Club Village.

Bouchey, a veteran amateur in these parts, birdied three of the first four holes, but Donahue was undaunted. Congratulations.

RANDY JONES of the San Diego Padres and Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, the Cy Young Award winners in their leagues, will compete in the 11th annual American Airlines Golf Classic.

The $30,000, 54-hole tournament, which features one star baseball and football player as partners, will be played Jan. 28-30 at the McCormick Ranch C.C. in Scottsdale, Ariz. First prize is $10,000 which the partners split.

Jones throws lefthanded, but will golf from the right side. He plays to a 13 handicap when he can get in a few rounds of golf.

Palmer, capable of shooting in the 70s, is a former American Airlines winner, teaming with Willie Richardson, ex-Baltimore Colts receiver, in 1972.

Daily fee golf courses, where about 200 million rounds are played annually, are in danger of becoming extinct, according to William W. Saunders, president of the National Assn. of Public Golf Courses.

Saunders blames soaring tax assessments and other "unrealistic government regulations" for the financial problems.

Saunders, who is also president of National Golf Courses Inc., a group of nine courses in California and Oregon, said courses are fighting a battle for survival.

"The daily fee courses provide the full functions of municipal courses, but are at a disadvantage because of the municipal courses real estate exemptions," Saunders say.

"Municipal courses get free or bargain-priced water rates and improvements are made with taxpayers' dollars, according to Saunders.

"All these benefits result in municipal courses charging unrealistically low rates," he says. "If we're lucky to make a profit, we pay income taxes, which municipal courses don't," says Saunders.

EIGHTY-ONE PLAYERS took home turkeys recently in the November Turkey Shoot at San Dimas Canyon. A grand total of 178 golfers showed up for the event. Next tournament out that way is Saturday, and it's a flag event, according to tourney director Bob Evans.

THE 1977 PGA PRO TOUR schedule will be highlighted by 43 major events with purses totaling more than $9 million, according to Deane Beamon, PGA Tour commissioner.

The tour will start Jan. 6 with the Phoenix Open. Two new events — The Colgate Hall of Fame Classic and the Sun Coast Mixed Team Championship — have been added. The Colgate Classic is scheduled for Aug. 25-28 at Pinehurst, N.C., while the Sun Coast event will be played next December at Bardmoor C.C. in Largo, Fla.

THE NASSAU TOURNAMENT at La Mancha was won by Lucille Moore with low net honors going to Laseeta Hieb in the first flight. Other winners were: 2nd flight, Margaret Mixon and Marge Franks; 3rd flight, Marie Downing and Marguerite Anderson.

Eighteen hole winners were: 1st flight, Bonnie Woodrow and Alta Hutchins; 2nd flight, Vicki Raddi and Mae Extale; 3rd flight, Madeline Maxwell.

LEWIS HOMES—SAN DIMAS

San Dimas development

Lewis scores 'brisk' sales

The environmental and architectural appeal of Lewis Homes residential communities is being demonstrated by brisk sales at two developments now in construction, it was noted by company vice-president Roger Lewis.

"One third of the homes being built at our Lewis Homes-Glendora community have been spoken for in the first two weeks since selling began," he said. Site of the single-family residences is at Glendora and Juanita Avenues, one block south of Gladstone Street, in Glendora.

Sales have now started also at the Lewis Homes-San Dimas development site, with five homes claimed by buyers "almost before we got the foundations laid," Lewis added. This project of single-family homes centers at Base Line Road and Walnut Avenue in San Dimas.

Lewis Homes-Glendora are priced from $55,000 to $70,000. The homes are being constructed in single-level and split-level elevations and with floor plans measuring from 1,540 to 2,194 square feet of liveable area plus a two or three-car garage.

Interior refinements being built into some of the homes include sunken living rooms, wet bars and dressing areas with luminous ceilings. Shake roofs were noted.

The development site may be reached from the Foothill Freeway (210) by turning south at Grand Avenue exit approximately one-half mile to Gladstone Street, then east (left) to Glendora Avenue and south (right) to the sales trailer. Another suggested route is via Foothill Boulevard and Alosta Avenue to Glendora Avenue, then south to the site.

A few miles away, Lewis Homes-San Dimas has proceeded in its construction to the framing stage. Here homes with three or four bedrooms, two full baths and two or three-car garages are priced from $43,900 to $53,000.

One of the plans (403) from which buyers may choose is a split-level styling whose unfinished basement requires only a few wall partitions to divide it into enclosed areas for an additional bathroom and recreation area.

Lewis Homes-San Dimas can be reached from Foothill Boulevard by turning south on San Dimas Avenue to Base Line Road, then east (left) on Base Line to the development's sales trailer. An alternate route is via the 210 freeway to the San Dimas Avenue exit, then north to Base Line and east (right) to the homes.

Sales trailers are open daily until dusk.

Rowland development reports 'sales' coup

Butler Housing's Suncrest Homes, a single-family development in Rowland Heights, has sold out in three months, reports Terry O'Neil, regional sales director for Walker & Lee, Inc.

"Sales of these units began in late August, and the 25-home series is now sold out," reports O'Neil. "Our buyers have already started to move."

Three- and four-bedroom Suncrest Homes feature slope-ceilinged living rooms, garden-view family rooms with fireplaces, country kitchens, large master suites, and attached two-car garages. Prices ranged from $42,591 to $47,900 with conventional financing.

O'Neil noted that the very popular Suncrest plans, which made their debut in Rowland Heights, are being repeated at a development now in Ontario. Because of lower land costs, Suncrest Homes in Ontario have substantially lower prices, from $34,950 to $41,200.

Immigration's great wave

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — An educational film, "People," tells how America's greatest wave of immigration carried 16 million persons through the gates of Ellis Island between 1890 and 1930.

A record total of 3,000 persons daily was admitted during 1907.

Tax rift prompts local drive

Red Carpet, Realtors throughout Southern California have stocked their offices from Ventura to San Diego with new property tax initiative petitions aimed at providing relief for the beleagured California property owner.

According to initiative supporters the measure is to be submitted directly to the electorate in 1977, and would limit "ad valorem" real property taxes to a maximum of one per cent of total cash value.

Backers of the proposal say that although the one per cent limitation will initally result in a loss of several billion dollars in State Tax Revenue, California would actually save over 700 million annually in homeowners a business inventory subventions, and an additional 50 million in senior citizens tax assistance payments.

Roger Johnson, president of Southern California's Red Carpet Broker's Council said: "We at Red Carpet feel that relief for the property owner is definitely overdue. If we can help by providing these petitions throughout our Southern California offices, we're certainly happy to do so. The property owner and the would-be property owner, are after all, our main concern."

Anyone interested in obtaining a petition may simply drop by a local Red Carpet, Realtor office.

New design for living

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrew Carnegie's spacious Fifth Avenue townhouse — itself something of a pioneering structure in design — is now a design museum.

Through a decade-long effort that at one time or another teamed up such varied partners as the Smithsonian Institution and the Johnson Wax Co., the big Fifth Avenue mansion, built for the steel tycoon in 1901, has become the new home of the Cooper-Hewitt Museum.

Home-building industry

Strong market forecast

MONTEREY — While concurring with forecasts of a strong housing market through 1978, a leader of California's homebuilding industry has declared that unless a broad-based government subsidy program is initiated and inflation harnessed families who can't qualify for a $46,000 home will soon have nowhere to go for shelter.

Commenting at the close of his group's recent Fall meeting here, Sacramento builder Paul Opp, president of the Pacific Coast Builders Conference, also cautioned that a market decline in qualified buyers and overbuilding in some price ranges and locales is a real possibility by the middle of 1977.

"While it does appear that a generally strong housing market will prevail through 1978, I have to believe that there will be declines in some areas once the current backlog of buyers dries up. This may be acute in some price ranges as people who can't qualify for the median priced home will have nowhere to turn," Opp said.

Declaring that higher priced homes ($70,000 and up) are likely to be unaffected by any lull in the marketplace, Opp stated that middle and lower income buyers are going to have to get some kind of subsidy if they are to be a viable force in the market.

"Right now subsidy programs are simply not broad enough. The programs need to be extended, or we'll have to come up with a program allowing for longer term loan pay offs on all forms of loans as perhaps one alternative. A 35 or 40-year conventional loan would make a substantial difference in qualifying more buyers," Opp said.

Making new approaches to qualifying buyers increasingly crucial, he continued, is an inflation rate in California's construction industry that is more than three times the overall rate, Opp declared.

"The only way to keep the cost of a house down is to control inflation. This is a problem of the entire economy, not a single component within it. In housing the problem is compounded because inflation has been sharper in materials, labor and land, all primary components of our finished product.

No Santa Claus

Yule customs have changed

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There was no Santa Claus at Christmas time for early Americans back in 1776. Nor were there any decorated Christmas trees or Christmas cards exchanged in the year the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Many of today's Yuletide customs were then unknown, according to Hallmark historian Sally Hopkins, but the people of the original 13 colonies did celebrate the holiday in widely varied ways.

In what is now Virginia, for instance, a typically merry English Christmas, complete with carol-singing and a festive dinner of roast goose and plum pudding, was the order of the day. One thing missing, though, was the decorated Christmas tree. "German immigrants brought that custom to America years later," reports Miss Hopkins. "The first recorded mention of it appears only in 1821."

Up in the Northeast, where Puritan influence still lingered and observance of Christmas was actually banned between 1659 and 1681, the celebration was more subdued. In some places, shops were open and Christmas was a working day.

In New Amsterdam, the present-day Manhattan, where most people were of Dutch and English ancestry, Christmas was a joyous occasion. Children did not hang stockings then, but often observed the old Dutch custom of placing wooden shoes by the fireplace on Christmas Eve, to be filled with small gifts by morning — but not by Santa. It was the mid-1800s before the revered Dutch figure of St. Nicholas had become popularized, first as Sinterklaas, then Santa Claus.

The grimness and glory of war marked Christmas Day, 1776, in the Pennsylvania and New Jersey region. On that day Gen. George Washington crossed the ice-clogged Delaware River and marched on Trenton through a blinding snowstorm. His troops soundly defeated the Hessian defenders, many of them caught unaware while celebrating Christmas with typical Old World revelry. It was Washington's morale-lifting Christmas present to the young nation in the second year of its Revolutionary War.

Westward, in the area now known as Kentucky and Tennessee, frontiersmen and settlers, unaware of the victory, observed Christmas in their isolated cabins and stockades. No doubt they feasted on the wild turkey that abounded in that region of river valleys, says Miss Hopkins.

Elsewhere in the America of 1776 people celebrated Christmas by attending church services and visiting the homes of their friends, which were often decorated with holly and evergreen wreaths. Children would be treated to small gifts of nuts, candy and fruits, and presents of hams and turkeys were given to poor people in the community.

Christmas cards were not exchanged in those days because they did not exist. The first Christmas card appeared in England in 1843, and the custom was first adopted here in 1875.

Cricket farmer

Chirping horde, hungry mouths?

DERIDDER, La. (AP) — Wallace Nichols feeds 1.5 million hungry mouths every day.

He's a cricket farmer, a business he sort of backed into 10 years ago.

"What made it so tough was the fact that no books have ever been published on cricket farming," said Nichols. "I had to learn everything the hard way, but I've worked out a system that lets me produce up to 1.5 million of these little fellows at a time."

The 60-year-old Deridder man began raising crickets to use as his own fish bait. Then, when his chirping horde began hatching faster than he could put them on a hook, he began selling his surplus to other fishermen.

Now, from his cricket farm in an old World War II mess hall at Beauregard Parish Airport, he wholesales only to bait dealers.

Nichols raises brown crickets imported from Australia. "They are more prolific than our native blacks and are in greater demand by fishermen because fish bite them better," he said.

Crickets, he found, flourish best at 90 degrees. "At that temperature, they are ready for market within 45 to 46 days," he said. "Lowering the setting to 85 degrees can retard development as much as a week."

The insects are voracious eaters. Nichols may need up to a ton of high-protein chick mash every four or five days during peak spring months. His annual feed bill is about $2,400.

Business briefs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The high-stakes bidding war over the extensive land holdings of the Irvine Foundation has been declared closed, with Mobil Oil the winner. But the controversy surrounding the land sale is far from over.

The Irvine Foundation said Thursday that Mobil's offer of $33.50 a share - or $21.9 million cash - was the best, after two other bidders failed to submit new offers by a noon deadline set by the foundation.

However, Cadillac Fairview Ltd. of Toronto, the largest publicly held real estate company in Canada, said it was prepared to offer more for the Irvine land, but only if the present auction bidding system were discarded and sealed bidding used. And Joan Irvine Smith — largest individual shareholder in the foundation — contended that a bid by AllenTaubman Co. of Detroit should be considered, even though it was turned in after the deadline.

She is said to favor the Allen-Taubman offer, which includes an exchange of Irvine land leases plus notes and cash, because the offer would permit minority Irvine stockholders to buy back into the new company up to one-half the shares they now hold.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two methane gas explosions which killed 26 men in a southeastern Kentucky coal mine last March were inevitable because of mine conditions and lax enforcement of safety regulations, a report by the house subcommittee on labor standards says.

The subcommittee report said that the two explosions at Scotia Coal Co.'s No. 1 mine at Oven Fork could have been prevented had either the company or the federal Mining enforcement and Safety Administration (MESA) taken ordinary precautions.

SEATTLE (AP) — Britannia Airways, an independent English line, has purchased two Boeing 737 twinjets, a spokesman said Thursday.

The jets will be delivered in April and May, he said.

Britannia began using 737 aircraft in 1968 and has 14 of them.

Almanac

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Dec. 12, the 347th day of 1976. There are 19 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1642, the Dutch navigator Abel Tasman discovered New Zealand.

In 1792, 22-year-old Ludwig Van Beethoven paid 19 cents for his first music lesson — from Franz Joseph Haydn.

In 1937, the U.S. gunboat Panay was sunk by the Japanese on the Yangtze River in China.

In 1944, Tokyo was partially evacuated because of fireboming by American planes.

In 1964, Kenya became an independent republic within the British Commonwealth.

Ten years ago: Former President Dwight Eisenhower was reported in good condition after an operation for the removal of his gall bladder.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon arrived in the Azores for a meeting with President Georges Pompidou of France.

One year ago: Sara Jane Moore pleaded guilty in San Francisco to charges of attempting to kill President Ford Sept. 22.

Today's birthday: Frank Sinatra is 61.

Thought for today: It is impossible, in our condition of society, not be sometimes a snob. — W.M. Thackeray, English writer, 1811-1863.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the American Continental Congress moved from Philadelphia to Baltimore as British forces advanced toward the Pennsylvania city.

Tax-cut talk a boon; busy trading week sparks market

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk of a tax cut to stimulate the economy gave the stock market a strong upward push this past week in the busiest trading in nine months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 22.60 to 973.15, reaching its highest level since early October.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index recorded a 1.94 gain to 104.70, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index picked up 1.13 to 56.33.

Big Board volume averaged 26.66 million shares a day, providing brokers with a nice year-end infusion of business. It was the busiest week since March 8-12, when the daily average was 27.25 million.

Topic A all week on Wall Street was the possibility of some early moves by President-elect Carter to pump some life into the recently sluggish economy.

Emissaries from several different groups proposed to Carter a combination of tax reductions and spending increases on the order of $15 billion.

Carter remained noncommital about what he might decide. But Thomas "Bert" Lance, who has been named to be the new president's budget chief, said he believed Carter would choose to push for a tax cut, and investors seemed to be thinking the same thing.

In addition, Wall Street seemed to be going on the assumption that a tax cut would prove to be the proper medicine for the economy's ills.

The mood, in any case, was far different from the uneasiness that gripped Wall Street in the first few days after Carter's victory in the Nov. 2 election.

The Dow fell more than 40 points in the first six sessions after Election Day, bottoming at 924.04 Nov. 10. Since then, however, it has regained all that loss and more.

At Friday's close, the Dow stood 7 points above where it had been on the eve of the election.

The market drew additional support from a falling prime lending rate. New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust lowered its prime from 6¼ to 6 per cent, and numerous other banks cut their basic rates on blue-chip loans from 6½ to 6¼.

Facing the investment community, and all the industrial nations, in the coming week is the scheduled decision by the Organization of Petroleum exporting Countries on oil prices.

To judge by the market's buoyant showing of late, investors seem to be banking on no more than a moderate price increase from OPEC.

American Telephone & Telegraph was a market leader in the past week, hitting a series of 10 year highs. The stock, a favorite of yield-conscious investors, benefitted from the downtrend in interest rates.

Rohr Industries shares jumped ahead as the company won a big Navy contract.

Advances outnumbered declines 1,545 to 401 among the 2,107 NYSE-listed issues traded during the week.

New highs for the year outnumbered new lows 402 to 20.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index picked up 3.05 to 103.20.

Aged work

Approximately one-fifth of men aged 65 and older are still working, says the American Council of Life Insurance. In 1950, about one-half of that age group were still on the job.

ART IN OIL — Upland artist Marria Casner displays some of her oil paintings that are now on exhibit at Pomona First Federal Savings & Loan Association. She has won many awards for her work.

Artist displays oil paintings

Oil paintings by Marria Casner of Upland are now on display at Pomona First Federal Savings & Loan Association, 399 N. Garey Ave., Pomona.

The group of paintings contains still lifes and landscapes, all of which are done objectively but with impressionistic overtones and the artist's own flair for color and form.

Mrs. Casner, a native of Ontario, was in the first graduating class of Montclair High School. A member of the Pomona Valley Art Association, she studied with Alan Blizzard of Scripps College and Betty Miller of Upland, and took watercolor techniques with Milford Zornes. She has received many community awards in the local area for her work.

Mrs. Casner is a triple career woman. She is a wife, mother and artist and runs her own business, Casner Enterprise of Ontario, which manufactures an orange and lemon sectioner used by hotels and restaurants throughout the country.

Crichton to write screenplay

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Crichton will write the screenplay and direct "Coma," from the upcoming novel by Robin Cook about terror in a modern hospital.

Crichton is the author of such novels as "The Andromeda Strain," "Terminal Man" and "The Great Train Robbery" and the writer-director of "Westworld."

The hospital setting will not be unfamiliar to Crichton, a graduate of the Harvard Medical School.

THE MARK TAPER FORUM of the Los Angeles Music Center will start off the new year with two sprightly comedies in repertory, Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" and Tom Stoppard's "Travesties." Previews begin Jan. 11. Says Edward Parone, Forum associate director, "Doing these two wonderful comedies in tandem is just about the most perfect repertory pairing we can dream up, because 'Travesties' is based strongly on 'The Importance of Being Earnest'." "Travesties," by the author of "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," won the Tony Award and the N.Y.Drama Critics Circle award as Best Play.

'Music is almost like breathing'

Korean trio on tour

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — The sound of strings blending with piano flowed through the apartment in one rich swell. The Chungs were warming up.

The Chungs — two sisters and brother — finished the exercise. A photographer was there, and the clicking of his still camera added a curious note to the sweet music.

They left their instruments — violin, cello and piano — and burst out laughing. It was all for the camera.

"Oh, we haven't begun to rehearse. That was just a warmup," said Myung-Wha Chung, a cellist and the eldest member of the talented Korean family.

Even in their brief warmup there was that technical precision and musical passion that is so apparent in live performance and on record. "Music is a part of our lives. It's almost like breathing," said Kyung-Wha, the petite violinist.

Kyung and Myung are on a tour of the Northeast with their pianist brother, Myung-Whun, for the American-Korean Cultural Society. A concert tour for the Chungs is rare, they seldom perform together in this country.

"We had to find the time when all three of us could do this," said Myung-Whun. "It might be the only time we will do it. Something like a group, especially a family, is attractive in this country.

"But there's the danger of being over-publicized and always being identified as a trio."

They want to be known individually — they scoff at being called "The Chung Trio" when they do appear together. "We love making music together, we really do," said Myung-Whun, and there were nods of assent. "But we each strongly pursue individual careers."

Kyung-Wha was the first to get international attention. At 19, she shared first place in the 1967 Edgar M. Leventritt International Competition.

Four years later, Myung-Wha, then 26, won first prize in the Geneva International Music Competition. Myung-Whun, 23, placed second in the 1974 Tchaikovsky International Piano Competition in Moscow.

HIGH KICKERS — Warming up for their presentation of Lorca's "Retablillo de Don Cristobal" at Pomona College Tuesday night are, from left, Anne Hull, Francisco Cabello, Susana Sanchez and Mario Cataldo. The play will be presented in Spanish. Admission is free.

Spanish play set in Pomona

Frederico Garcia Lorca's "Retablillo de Don Cistobal" will be presented in Spanish at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Oldenborg Center, Pomona College. Admission is free.

Lorca, one of the most famous poets and playwrights that Spain has produced, wrote the short play in a highly individual and very sensual style. The comedy tells about Don Cristobol, an aging doctor, and his marriage to Dona Rosita, a pretty young girl in her twenties.

The play, directed by Francisco Cabello, will be presented entirely in Spanish, but for those who do not understand the language, a summary in English is included in the program.

The play is open to the public. Refreshments will be served before the presentation.

Lampoon writers to script movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National Lampoon magazine is teaming up with Universal Pictures for a movie to be called "National Lampoon's Animal House."

National Lampoon has produced five record albums, two musical comedies and a nationally syndicated radio program. This is its first venture into movies.

GARY GRAFFMAN, termed by Newsweek magazine "one of the greatest living pianists," will present a recital in the Ambassador Auditorium, Pasadena, at 2:30 this afternoon. He will play works by Brahms, Schubert, Prokofieff and Rachmaninoff.

Actor to do Dylan Thomas

Emlyn Williams will present his one-man show, "Dylan Thomas Growing Up," in the Forum of the Los Angeles Music Center Dec. 27 through Jan. 2.

Like his "Charles Dickens," which Williams has performed all over the world, "Dylan Thomas Growing Up" has become something of a legend in the theater for the past 20 years. It was when he took part in the first stage performance of Dylan Thomas' "Under Milk Wood" that he realized how its author had been veering toward the theater, and how, had he lived, the theater might have been enriched by his talents.

From Thomas' many works, Williams weaves a theatrical evening which first met enormous critical attention at the Globe Theatre in London in 1955. Subsequently, he has returned to "Dylan" every few years between his numerous plays, films and book publications.

Tickets go on sale at the box office Wednesday. Mail orders are now being accepted, and a special discount is available to Forum subscribers who respond before Wednesday.

Paramount signs up director

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It hasn't happened in Hollywood for years, and at Paramount Pictures not for 21 years.

John Frankenheimer has been signed to direct movies exclusively for Paramount—a contract that harks back to the heyday of the studios.

Station KPFK to hold Merrie Christmas Fair

Radio station KPFK will sponsor the fifth annual Merrie Christmas Fair at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium from noon to 11 p.m. daily Dec. 17 through 23, except Dec. 20.

More than 110 costumed artists and artisans will sell their wares at gaily decorated booths, and continuous entertainment will be provided by international dance troupes, ethnic orchestras, Renaissance ensembles, puppeteers, mimes, jugglers, magicians, story-tellers and theater groups. The program will also offer Christmas caroling, folk dancing, madrigal singing and demonstrations by belly dancers. A wide variety of food and drink will be available.

The fair is a benefit for the listener-supported radio station. Tickets are $3.50 general, 50 cents for children under 12.

Knott's greets local groups

Several local musical groups will join others from all over Southern California in the Holiday Festival of Music at Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park Monday through Dec. 24.

Concerts will be presented by more than 65 groups, including choirs, ensembles, marching bands, orchestra, brass choirs, bell groups and an accordian band. The program is directed by Thomas Antal, choral director of Fountain Valley High School.

Local participants are the choir of the Pomona First Assembly of God Church, 4:30 p.m. Monday; singers and band of the First Baptist Church of Pomona, 11:30 a.m. Saturday; the Claremont High School Orchestra, 1 p.m. Saturday; the Claremont High School Band, 2:30 p.m. Saturday; the choir of the La Verne Church of the Brethren, 6:30 p.m. next Sunday; the Alta Loma High School Choir, 4 p.m. Dec. 21, and the Alta Loma High School Chamber Group, 4:30 p.m. Dec. 21.

The Montclair Symphonette gave a concert at Knott's Saturday afternoon.

Shepards observe 50th anniversary

At an open house in the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Shepard, the Rex Earl Shepards of Pomona celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Also serving as host and hostesses were the Shepards' daughter, Mrs. Alice Stowell, and son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Richard Shepard of Claremont.

The party was attended by 18 guests including Mrs. Shepard's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Terrence McArron.

The Shepards have seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. They were married Nov. 30, 1926, in Eureka, Kans., by Judge S. L. Chase. They lived in Kansas and northern California before coming to Pomona in 1946. Mr. Shepard is retired from Carpenters' Local 1752.

Christian Women chart luncheon

Pomona Valley Christian Women's Club will hold a meeting on Dec. 15 at noon in the Pavilion at Griswold's Restaurant.

A special program is planned around the theme "Christmas Memories." Highlighting the day will be the speaker, Velma Spencer, one of the founders of the Women's Christian sorority, Lambda Theta Chi.

Velma met and married Tim Spencer in the early '30s when he began his professional career with Roy Rogers and the Sons of the Pioneers. Together, they were leaders of the Hollywood Christian Group which met at their home for five years.

Tim Spencer founded Manna Music Publishing Company and was publisher of many well known gospel hymns and sacred music. Mrs. Spencer is part owner of Manna Music Company and serves on their board of directors. Mr. Spencer retired in 1969 and served as a member of the Board until his death in 1974.

The Spencers' daughter, Loretta, is married to the Rev. Ronald Smith, a teacher in the Ontario Christian High School.

Preceding the speaker, Fashion Boutique of Claremont will present some of their winter fashions, modeled by members of the Christian Women's Club. Linda Fryman, vocalist, will bring music for the day.

The board meeting will be on Jan. 6 at the home of Sally Waters, 312 E. Bonnie Brae, Ontario, with Fran Messenger serving as cohostess.

Women of the Pomona Valley are invited to attend the luncheon meeting.

VELMA SPENCER

Holiday program planned

United Methodist Women of Claremont United Methodist Church will hear the Women's Handbell Choir of the church when the group meets at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, at Claremont Manor, 650 W. Harrison Ave., Claremont.

Mrs. Leslie Sayre is in charge of the Christmas play, "First Night," by James Stuckey.

Members will bring gifts for girls at the David and Margaret Home in La Verne.

Child care will be provided at the church.

Nutrition session set in Claremont

Paul L. Helzer, director of Helzer Chiropractic Clinics, will discuss "Chiropractic and Preventive Nutrition" at the 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, meeting of Pomona Valley Chapter, American Nutrition Society. The meeting will be held at Claremont Public Library.

Act promptly

Remove beaters from a portable mixer promptly after use. Rinse the beaters, if not washing right away in suds. Otherwise, food will harden on the blades and be more difficult to remove.

First yule card

The first Christmas cards in the United States were printed by Louis Prang, a German immigrant, in Roxbury, Mass., in 1875. Many of the cards featured arrangements of Killarney roses.

Cold drink

Heat a can of fruit cocktail with 2 cups of orange juice, a cinnamon stick and a few cloves for a tangy and delicious cold weather drink.

Finck and Gross vows exchanged

The Bridges Concert Hall at Pomona College was the setting for the marriage of Janet Gross of Los Angeles and David S. Finck of Los Angeles. The couple was wed by Rabbi Ben Beliak in an evening ceremony followed by a reception at Wilbur Hall, Scripps College.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Gross of Montclair. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Finck of West Haven, Conn.

Miss Harriet Gross of Montclair was maid of honor. Serving as best man was Vladimir Nacev of Hollywood, Nancy Bornstein of Huntington Beach and Howard J. Durlester of Beverly Hills.

The newlyweds honeymooned at Laguna, Connecticut and Maryland before establishing a home in Los Angeles.

Rawson and Herring vows are repeated

Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church in Montclair was the setting for the marriage of Debra Ann Rawson of Chino and Michael Lee Herring of Chino. The couple was married by the Rev. Philip O'Carroll in a morning ceremony followed by a reception at Diamond Bar Country Club.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman W. Smith of Chino and Walter E. Rawson of Cicero, N.Y. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Edward Herring of Chino. Miss Laura DeRegis, cousin of the bride, of Tully, N.Y. was honor attendant. Serving as best man was Terry George of Ontario.

Other attendants were Nanette Fiala, Syracuse, N.Y., Sue Sullivan, Pomona and Mary Jean Hieb, Upland. Patrick Herring, Edward Rawson and Bernard Wendling, Chino, were ushers.

The newlyweds honeymooned at Las Vegas and are now at home in Pomona.

MRS. M HERRING

Installation for federal retirees set

WANDA JONES

Music program charted by club

Wanda Crockett Jones will present the program at the mother-daughter noon luncheon of the San Dimas Woman's Club on Dec. 16 at the Stanley Plummer Community Building.

A native Californian, Mrs. Jones began her studies with piano and then organ. Her unusual solo harp stylings have been featured on radio, television and concert stage many times. As a recording artist she has produced albums including "Day by Day," "Romance," "The Promise of Faith," and "The Promise of Christmas."

Introductions and descriptions of her numbers are given in an easy and unassuming manner that creates a pleasing rapport with her audience.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling Mrs. M.C. Peterson, 599-3583 or Mrs. Gustav Stankov, 599-4454, by 5 p.m., Dec. 13. Cohostesses for the day are Mrs. Larry Dean and Mrs. James Tolle. Devotions will be given by Mrs. James Minarik and the flag salute will be led by Mrs. Milton J. Harrison.

Experts say your auto tires must be cool to give a correct measurement of their inflation pressure.

Chapters schedule meetings

Two chapters of PEO have scheduled meetings this week.

The Christmas meeting for Chapter PD, PEO Sisterhood will be held in the home of Miss Marjorie Crouch, 695 W. 10th St., Claremont, at 7:30 p.m., Monday. Cohostesses will be Mrs. Shirley Dooling and Mrs. Ilene McDonald.

"A Vision of Loveliness" is the theme for the music program to be presented by Mrs. Madge Kamm.

A Christmas party is planned by Chapter CS, PEO, at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, in the home of Mrs. M. F. Powell, 731 Alamoso Drive, Claremont.

Hostesses will be Mrs. Marjorie Cooley, Mrs. Gertrude Griggs and Mrs. Pamela Herrlinger.

Bethel 47 installs officers for new term

Pomona Bethel 47 of the International Order of Job's Daughters held their 100th semi-annual installation of officers Saturday evening at the Pomona Masonic Temple.

Miss Linda Knipping was installed honor queen. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Knipping of Pomona. She is a sophomore at Cal Poly Pomona. She has been active in Job's Daughters for six years. During that time she has held the offices of outer guard, first messenger, second messenger, fourth messenger, fifth messenger, recorder and chaplain.

Other elective officers who were installed were Carolyn Walter, senior princess; Debbie Lightfoot, junior princess; Samantha Gregory, guide; and Lynn Scharf, marshal.

The appointive officers who will serve a six-month term are: Kelli Branett, chaplain; Shirley Walter, treasurer; LeAnn Fitch, recorder; Linda Raisbeck, musician; Kathryn Marie Newman, librarian; Staci Nyman, first messenger; Marcie Mes, second messenger; Jessica Glasgow, third messenger, Eileen Ditsler, fourth messenger; Donna Miller, fifth messenger; Judy Tyler, senior custodian; Doreen Thompson, junior custodian; Marcia Mattern, inner guard; Tammy Landreth, outer guard.

The Bethel Guardian Council includes Mrs. Imogene Lane, bethel guardian; Mr. Bobby Gregory, associate bethel guardian; Mrs. Peggy Scharf, guardian secretary; Mr. Donald Miller, guardian treasurer; Mrs. Martha Gregory, custodian of paraphernalia; Mrs. Earline Landreth, director of epochs, and Mrs. Joan Lightfoot, director of music.

Installing officers were: Miss Kelli Barnett, installing honored queen; Miss Tammy Landreth, installing guide; Miss Melanie Saxe, installing marshal; Miss Tammy Jordan, installing chaplain; Miss Margaret White, installing recorder; Mrs. Marva Karns, installing musician; Miss Laura Bolten, installing junior custodian, all past honored queens of Bethel 47. Also participating was Miss Tammy Siebert, installing senior custodian and past junior princess of Bethel 47.

LYNDA KNIPPING

The master of ceremonies for the evening was Richard Bruner, past associate bethel guardian of Bethel 47, past grand associate bethel guardian to the state of California, and past supreme associate bethel guardian. The narration was done by Mrs. Fay Bruner, past bethel guardian of Bethel 47, and past grand guardian to the state of California. The candlelighters were Miss Lorelei Sprott, senior princess of Bethel 191, Chino. And Miss Roberta Tracy, past junior princess of Bethel 301, Claremont. The soloist was Miss Lynne Hagelberg. The hostesses were Miss Julie Countryman and Miss Teddy Jabor. The ushers for that evening were Mr. Donald Scharf Jr., senior councilor of Chino Order of DeMolay. And Mr. Kevin Kelly, senior councilor of Pomona Order of DeMolay. The electrician was Mr. Daniel Smith, master councilor of Pomona Order of DeMolay. The guest book was handled by Miss Ellen Simpson and Miss Darlene Scharf.

The installation was followed by a reception and dance. The band at the dance was Red Light.

German tree

The Christmas tree was introduced to America by German settlers in the 18th century. The tree, the Dove of Peace and Santa Claus are among the most popular symbols on Christmas greeting cards.

WCTU schedules yule meet

'Oh, my aching back'

Homo sapiens rebel over walking erect

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

That's the frequent cry of pain and anguish from Homo sapiens (that's us) who can stand and walk erect. But we must do this using a structurally weak trunk to support our limbs and head.

Back pain is one of man's most common medical complaints and possibly one of the least understood. Doctors at St. Francis Hospital of Miami Beach, Fla., have researched the causes and suggest ways and means to ease the pain of our aching backs.

Doctors explain that ruptured discs are separate and serious problems in back ailments. However, there's a good chance the spine signals other pains from arthritis, muscle strains and what we commonly refer to as a "charley horse."

The St. Francis Hospital survey showed elderly people are particularly susceptible to back pain because of physical changes in advancing years. The spinal discs tend to flatten out, become fibrous and lose their resiliency. There is a reduction in the mobility of the spine. Leaking of the gel-like substance in the inner core of a disc may be a warning of a possible slipped disc. Ligaments, tendons and muscles also grow old and become non-stretchable fibrous tissue. And when all this happens, the back becomes subject to sprains, strains and spasms.

If for many years we've given up tennis and other strenuous activity we shouldn't take on any taxing physical exertions. It's okay to walk, swim and engage in other mild health-building exercises. But we must remember not to do anything which will put a strain on an aging back. And surely not lift heavy objects, dig in the garden or shovel snow.

I've suffered from a lumbar condition in my lower back for more than 25 years, which may have been caused by a fall on a tennis court, poor posture and bad sitting forgot.

We made a trip to New York City this summer and the old pain returned, probably because I had lifted and carried luggage for short distances. The lower back ache went away after a few days but I had a new and excruciating pain which ran from my left hip down to the ankle. I assumed this was a "charley horse" brought on when I used muscles which had been inactive and I treated the pain with aspirin and rubbing linament. But that hip, leg and ankle pain seemed to get much worse. I couldn't walk and I didn't suspect that this new pain was caused by something that had happened to my spine.

We cut short our vacation and a local orthopedist's X rays showed two of the lower vertebrae bones had grown close together and were pinching nerves which went from the spine to the lower left side of my body.

I was confined to bed for a week. The second week I was permitted to split bed time with mild activity around the house. The new pain has almost completely disappeared and I can resume my old activities, in moderation.

I now carefully follow the instructions from my own doctor, which were also included in the St. Francis Hospital report. These tips also may help those in their 20s or 30s avoid early back problems.

Now whenever I must stand for a long period of time I shift my weight by resting the left foot on a stool or similar object.

I sleep on my back with a pillow under my knees or sleep on my side with knees bent. But never on my stomach.

Whenever possible I lie down instead of sitting up.

I won't make any sudden turns when picking up something. Instead of bending to lift anything I bend my knees and squat.

I avoid the deep sofa in the living room and the soft easy chair in front of the TV set in my den. I have an old hard-seated and straight-backed kitchen-type chair which I carry around the house. And I sit well back on the chair and avoid slouching.

By wearing a new girdle I may be able to get back to the golf course. But the first thing I will do is buy a lightweight golf bag and discard at least half of my clubs. The reduced weight will be easier on my back and I probably will shoot a better score when I don't have to make the decision whether to use a six iron or a seven iron to reach the green.

Drugs plague Slavs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav officials are concerned about a sharp increase in the flow of drug traffic this year.

In the first eight months of 1976, customs officials seized over 3,200 pounds of opiumbased drugs valued at $2.4 million. In the previous five years, the total was about 4,700 pounds.

The drug trail through Yugoslavia comes from the Orient through Bulgaria and leaves at one of the Austrian border checkpoints on the way to central and western Europe. Yugoslav officials say most of the smugglers are Turks, but also Lebanese, Pakistani, Jordanian, German and British passport holders.

A Turk was caught with the largest amount of smuggled drugs this year — about 650 pounds.

Interpol and United Nations agencies are among the international bodies which help Yugoslav officials keep track of the drug traffic.

"Judging by the way the drug is transported and 'explanations' offered by the smugglers, our suspicions are confirmed that organized networks of smugglers are involved," says Vido Popadic, a counselor in the federal customs office in Belgrade.

"The fact that usually poor people are driving expensive limousines and carrying vast quantities of the costly drugs rules out the possibility that it is a one-man affair," he said.

Boris Borisov, the shirt-sleeved young mayor of Dimitrovgrad, says having the Gradina border checkpoint in his jurisdiction has created enormous problems for the community to house all those jailed.

"Of the total number of inmates 96.6 per cent are international criminals and only 3.4 per cent are local offenders," he said.

"The amount of drugs being destroyed according to the law runs to billions of dinars, but our community does not get a single cent."

Red, white and blue?

NEW YORK (AP) — The Continental Congress selected the 13 stars and 13 stripes as the symbol for our nation's first official flag, but apparently never left a record of why it selected red, white and blue.

An explanation was offered in 1782, when the Congress of the Confederation chose the same three colors for the newly designed Great Seal of the United States, according to "World Book Encyclopedia." The resolution on the seal listed meanings for the colors. Red represented hardness and courage. White stood for purity and innocence and blue for vigilance, perseverance and justice.

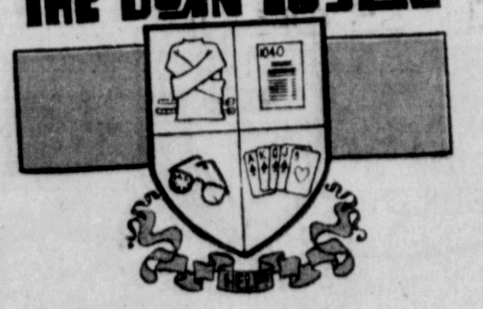
THE BORN LOSER



REWARD!!
WE'LL PAY YOU $50.00 FOR THIS 1972 PENNY!

It's slightly different from most 1972 pennies, yet there are thousands like it in circulation right now. Do you know what the difference is?

Did you spend this coin today? Think of the many other valuable coins that might slip through your fingers in your change each day. Some coins will bring you over $1,000.00. J. G. Manges of St. Lou is just found a recently dated penny that was worth $30,000.00

Our brand new, 1977 Coin Guidebook shows you how much America's best coin dealer guarantees to pay for hundreds of valuable coins.

For Certain	Dated on or Before	Up To
Nickels	1913	$95,000.00
Gold Coins	1931	$88,000.00
Silver Dollars	1934	$75,000.00
Quarters	1938	$ 5,000.00
Half Dollars	1939	$ 1,200.00
Pennies	1944	$15,000.00
Dimes	1921	$ 310.00

THE RICE DIET

IT'S A HEALING DIET AS WELL AS A REDUCING DIET

The famous Rice Diet wasn't even designed for taking off fat. It was created as a healing diet. And heal it does.

IT CONTAINS NO CHOLESTEROL

Medical Research has acclaimed a no fat diet as being of paramount aid in the treatment of certain heart and kidney conditions. Scientists also advocate this program as the basis of a general reducing diet.

The health value of this diet is founded upon the fact that it contains no cholesterol – which many doctors believe dangerous to the heart, kidneys, and blood circulation.

THE DIET REVERSES MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY HEART DISORDERS

Twenty-five years ago our medical establishment was extremely skeptical of the startling discovery that the Rice Diet reverses much of the damage done by blood vessel, eye, heart, and kidney disorders. Without any medication other than a prolonged diet largely composed of unsalted rice, some enlarged hearts grew smaller, blood pressures and blood sugar dropped.

CLAIMS FOR THE RICE DIET VERIFIED BY TEAMS OF DOCTORS

Teams of doctors from leading institutions around the world investigated the diet. They thought that they would scoff at the claims, but they applauded instead. "The question now," concluded a report in one eminent medical journal, "is not 'Does the diet work?' The question is 'How does it work?'"

FAMOUS PEOPLE HAVE ENDORSED THE RESULTS OF RICE DIETING

"I truly would have died if I hadn't gone" on a program of rice dieting, says the wife of a former state governor. "I was seriously ill and weighed 230 pounds." She dropped 80 pounds in 19 weeks, and her blood sugar plummeted as well. (Since the diet is largely carbohydrate, this is one of the mysteries of it.)

A famous singer and movie actor, on the other hand, got hooked on the taste of the diet and lost 80 pounds, too. He still follows the diet every day. Before the Rice Diet, he had been on a high protein diet for ten years or so. "I used to have to put down a pound of steak before a recording," he says. "Now, I can eat a little rice and sing like a bird."

The complete program brings you essential information and dozens of delicious menus and easy recipes for breakfast, lunch, and dinner.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — While water will usually remove latex paint, it will not remove it from polished fingernails. Now I put a little petroleum jelly over my nails before painting, and all is well. — G.M.

© 1976 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — When packing a pleated skirt for traveling I roll the waistband tightly and draw the skirt into an old nylon stocking. The skirt stays neat and wrinkle-free, and it takes up little room in a suitcase. — KRISTEN.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — I brought up from the basement an old hall tree. It had four projecting brackets. I added four more, then I hung eight hanging plants on the brackets. Some plants are in antique containers and others in clay pots set in decorative plastic containers. I made macrame hangers to hold the pots. — VIOLA.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for home painters. Cut out the top of a plastic milk bottle, leaving the handle attached. This makes a good, lightweight paint container to hold while painting and lessens the chance of spilling paint. — SISTER D.M.

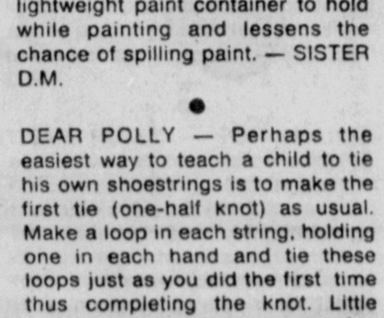
DEAR POLLY — Perhaps the easiest way to teach a child to tie his own shoestrings is to make the first tie (one-half knot) as usual. Make a loop in each string, holding one in each hand and tie these loops just as you did the first time thus completing the knot. Little fingers seem to find this easier to do. — KATHYLYN.



DEAR POLLY — My mother made an extra bed for an overnight guest with two pieces of foam rubber and a piece of plywood the same size. The piece of three-inch-thick foam was glued to a three-inch-thick piece of supersoft foam, casters were put on the plywood, the foam (hard side down) put on top of the plywood. It is easily rolled under another bed for storage. — SUSAN.

DEAR POLLY — When we are camping, I save on charcoal for the grill by putting in small rocks until it is from one-half to three-fourths full and then put charcoal on top of the rocks. — SCOT.

DEAR POLLY — When the oven needs cleaning I remove shelves and covers around the burners and let them soak for a couple of hours in hot water with dishwasher detergent added. They come out clean without hard scrubbing and there's no smelly odor from regular oven cleaner. — ELAINE.

Quick Crochet

FOR A UNIQUE NEW SENSATION

GET INTO BED!

READ, WATCH TV, or SLEEP.....
In Comfort You Never Dreamed Possible.

Niagara® Therapy Mfg. Corp. introduces the revolutionary new NIAGARA AUTOMATIC ADJUSTABLE BED with CYCLO-MASSAGE.®

This remarkable bed is a development of the bedding industry, scientific study, and research.

AMAZING NEW COMFORT

Simply flick the Hand-control Wand. Instantly this bed adjusts -- automatically -- to a thousand posture-perfect positions.

At last you can Read, Watch Television, Write, Eat, Sew -- without strain or backache! The new-concept Niagara Bed electrically raises, lowers, bends and shapes to fit your body. You "float" in relaxed comfort.

Husband and wife can assume different positions at the same time.

Built-into the new Niagara Bed is

NIAGARA CYCLO-MASSAGE

We tested Niagara for 15 years in hospitals. We spent more than 1½ million dollars on research and engineering.

Here's what clinically-approved Niagara Cyclo-Massage helps to accomplish:

- *Eases everyday Nervous Tension . . .
- *Relieves minor pain of sore, aching muscles and joints, soothes tired back, feet and legs . . .
- *Increases blood circulation in areas of contact . . .
- *Promotes deep, restful sleep, without drugs . . .

THE NIAGARA ADJUSTABLE BED with CYCLO-MASSAGE IS MORE THAN JUST A BED.

One-third of your life is spent in bed. Enjoy it!

Enjoy it in the bed that automatically lifts your head, feet and body to posture-correct positions, helps eliminate neck, back and eye-strain. Now you are able to read, watch TV, dine and sleep in comfort!

Enjoy it in the bed that assures you the benefits of Cyclo-Massage. By just touching a button, you feel Niagara's exhilarating, pain-reducing massage action begin to soothe and caress your body. The new production of "Peter Pan," starring Mia Farrow and Danny Kaye—the Silver Jubilee presentation on the Hallmark Hall of Fame on NBC—is The Big Event colorcast this Sunday at 7:30PM. Sir John Gielgud and Julie Andrews are off-camera participants in the program along with the roster of personalities previously announced. Gielgud is the narrator. Andrews sings one of the original songs—"Once Upon A Bedtime"—during the prologue to this new, musical adaptation of Sir James Barrie's story about a boy who refuses to grow up.

Choreographer Edward Villella and Anna Aragno dance the young bridal couple and Richard Tanner is the minister in "Little Women," a special ballet version of the famous Louisa May Alcott novel airing as an NBC Special Treat, the series for older children, Tuesday at 4PM. Joanne Woodward is the on-camera narrator for the special.

"The Little Drummer Boy Book II," a new animated musical special for the Christmas season headlining Zero Mostel, with Greer Garson as the storyteller, airs on NBC, Monday at 8PM. The new production opens with the Little Drummer Boy, Aaron, at the manger. His adventures begin when he decides to accompany Melchior, one of the Wise Men, on an important journey. Melchior is on his way to visit Simeon, the bellmaker, to ask that he ring his silver bells so that the whole land will know about the birth of the Christ Child.

FAMILY ORCHESTRA

Built-in family orchestra: sidemen include Jackie Davidson, John's wife, on accordion; John, on baritone horn, John's father, Rev. James Davidson, on clarinet; his brother, Dr. David Davidson, on violin; another brother, Lee Davidson, on flute; a niece, Terri Snyder, Jackie's sister, and Terri's mother Bobbie Snyder on sax; and John's mother, Elizabeth, at the piano.

One of the most enthusiastically inept orchestras in the history of television—or in the history of anything, for that matter— makes its network debut Wednesday on "The John Davidson Christmas Show," on NBC at 8 PM.

The anachronistic aggregation, a tongue-in-cheek throwback to John Philip Sousa on a bad day, is strictly a Davidson family affair. Its sidemen (to give them professional courtesy) include; Jackie Davidson, John's wife, on accordion; John's father, the Rev. James Davidson, on clarinet; his brother, Dr. David Davidson, on violin; another brother, medical student Lee Davidson, on flute; a niece, Terri Snyder, on sax; Jackie's sister and Terri's mother, Bobbie Snyder, also on sax; John's mother, Elizabeth, at piano; and John himself in a cheek-puffing battle with a baritone horn.

The American Federation of Musicians has taken the position that the group need not join the union. "We don't ask frogs and crickets to join," a spokesman commented, "and they make better music."

One of the Lennon Sisters sums up the orchestra's performance on the show both diplomatically and succinctly: "Hey, John, that was really—something."

Featuring 18 assorted Davidsons and 18 assorted Lennons, the family-oriented show was filmed at Davidson's home in the San Fernando Valley—in the middle of one of the hottest Octobers in California history.

'DIVERSE TALENT'

Beneath the farcical facade of the dress-wearing corporal who has added a unique dimension to the highly acclaimed M*A*S*H series (on CBS, Tuesdays at 9 PM), lies an actor of exceptionally diverse talent. Admittedly, his role of the off-beat Corporal Klinger who unceasingly seeks a psycho service discharge by putting on female attire has given Jamie Farr the exposure and recognition he had never known in a 20-year show business career. Farr once commented that after regular appearances on The Red Skelton Show, The Danny Kaye Show, Dear Phoebe with Peter Lawford and in half a dozen movies "nobody recognizes me."

But, after entering his third season as a regular on one of television's most honored programs, that situation has reversed itself. He surely ranks as one of the most recognizable personalities in the medium. And that public recognition has paid off in constant demand for his services on a variety of television programs—game and talk shows, guest starring roles on dramatic series—and personal appearances at functions throughout the country. Earlier this year he broke in a night club act at the Boston Playboy Club so successfully that his engagement was held over.

Farr, a native of Toledo, Ohio, discovered a year ago the impact his bizarre characterization on M*A*S*H had made at an Ohio college when a news story datelined Dayton revealed that Wright State University was initiating an annual "Corporal Klinger Drag Race" around the campus quadrangle. As a part of the university's "May Daze" celebration, willing males, clad in feminine frocks, sprinted in awkward fashion over the course for prizes as the first to finish without losing major garments, the sexiest runner and the best-dressed entry. To avoid a sexist connotation, coeds were welcome to enter, provided they wore army fatigues and combat boots.

While attending a governor's conference on highway safety in Missouri, the national impact of M*A*S*H again was brought home to Farr as he learned that the "Show Me" state had adapted the program name to its safety campaign. Instead of Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, M*A*S*H represented "Missourians for Active Safety on the Highways." "Some of the people I met asked if they could use a highway safety poster of me in a dress with the slogan 'Don't Let This Happen to You,' " he recalls. "I told the governor I deserved a safety award for a perfect record. Not for driving, but for never having fallen off those high heels as Klinger."

Though known principally for comedy portrayals, including a regular series role on The Chicago Teddy Bears, his schooling in drama at the Pasadena Playhouse, where he performed in "King Lear" and "Outward Bound," amply prepared him for serious roles in The Blue Knight mini-series with William Holden and Barnaby Jones on the Network and motion picture parts in "The Blackboard Jungle" and "The Greatest Story Ever Told."

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR IRVING MANSFIELD, widower of Jacqueline Susann, author of "Dolores"

Was "Dolores" based on Jackie Onassis, and do you know whether she has read the book?—Steve Gargan, Grand Rapids, Mich.

● Since the plot concerns the widow of an assassinated U.S. President, who later marries a shipping tycoon, draw your own conclusions! When Mrs. Onassis was asked whether she'd read the book, I'm told she said: "Have I read it? I'm living out the sequel." By the way, the book is going to be made into a film. When I saw Telly Savalas recently, I told him to put his oar in for the role of the Greek shipping tycoon, a natural since Telly's Greek. Telly, who's going to make three films for Universal (one of the companies interested in the book), is keeping his fingers crossed, hoping that if they do buy it, he'll get the part.

FOR EDGAR BERGEN, ventriloquist

As a senior citizen, what's your secret for staying young?—S.M., Buffalo, N.Y.

● The one thing I don't do is worry or wonder about the future. (It's nicer to dwell on the past!) I exercise more than I used to, eat what's good for me instead of what I like. Most important: I try to avoid doctors. Seems to me they're in love with pills. Also, I've become spiritual. I haven't given up sin—it's the other way around!

FOR JUDITH GUEST, author of "Ordinary People"

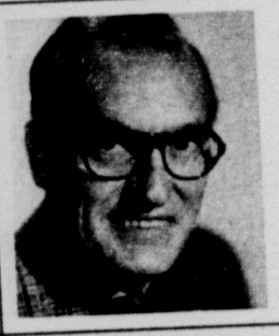
Why did you feel a twinge of guilt when you heard that your manuscript would be the first unsolicited manuscript Viking Press had accepted in 27 years?—Mary Leonard, Sacramento, Calif.

● Because I never lived in a garret, never had to deprive myself while writing as a housewife. My first reaction was disbelief. Then ecstasy.

FOR SANDY DUNCAN, actress

Are you as giddy as you appear to be on talk shows? If not, why do you seem that way?—E.B., Steubenville, Ohio

● The real me is half-way between serious and silly! The problem began with my first talk show. I found it very hard to go into details about my private life. I skirted those questions by dwelling on funny things, like the time I chased a lizard out of my bedroom. I avoided the personal stuff but got labeled a dizzy blonde.



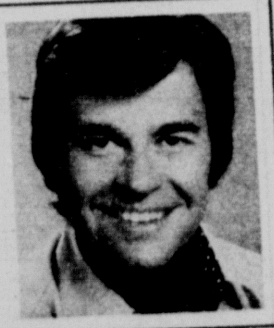
FOR DAVE GARROWAY, former talk show host

I hear you have some strange hobbies. What are they?—F.S., Santa Monica, Calif.

● I don't know that autos and astronomy are strange. I've owned 60 sports cars over the years, including 15 antique Rolls-Royces. I'm also into sports cars and racing. I have a collection of astronomy instruments including a 100-year-old 9½-inch telescope made by Alvan Clark, the Stradivari of telescope lens makers. (The Smithsonian Institution wants it.)

FOR DICK CLARK, host of "American Bandstand"

Many dancers on your show come back every week. Are they hired for the show, or do they buy season tickets?—Leon Yankwich, Urbana, Ill.



● For almost 25 years, admission to American Bandstand has been by invitation only—but it's free. The dancers on the program are strictly audience participants. Many come back and become regular attendees and are therefore seen frequently.

FOR ROBYN SMITH, jockey

Do the men in your sport ever deliberately try to embarrass you?—A.R., Aberdeen, S.D.

● When I first started riding, there was a great deal of prejudice against girl jockeys, but since I've become successful (and many other girls are riding, too), my only real moments of humiliation are when my horse runs a disappointing race, and the crowd yells, "Why don't you get back into the kitchen?"

FOR BARBARA BAIN, star of TV's "Space: 1999"

What do you do if you get unexpected visitors?—J.R., Lebanon, Pa.

● Behave in a rude and merciless way. Most of our friends have the intelligence to call before dropping in. To those who don't, and arrive, saying, "I just happened to be passing by," I say, "Well, then, keep passing." The only exception to this rule would be if Artur Rubinstein wanted to come in and give a piano recital for me.

FOR ANN LANDERS, columnist

Where did you get the phrase, "Wake up and smell the coffee" (a euphemism for face the facts)?—B.L., Bartlesville, Okla.

● From my twin sister's mother-in-law, Mrs. Jay Phillips, who lives in Minneapolis. She's my great friend. I heard her say it about 25 years ago and have been using it ever since.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Can you tell me what Annette Funicello is doing these days? I always used to watch her on the Mickey Mouse Club's show.—B.N., Asbury Park, N.J.

Annette Funicello

● After the series ended, Annette went on to make "beach party" pictures (with horribly teased hair and skin that never tanned), and in 1965 married her agent, Jack Gilardi. For a few years, because of their three children, Annette kept a rather low profile, with only occasional TV guest appearances. Annette—who was Walt Disney's favorite mouseketeer—was recently on Frankie Avalon's CBS-TV series, "Easy Does It." Incidentally, did you know that the Mickey Mouse Club is going to be revived next year? And you might also be interested in a book that's coming out soon, Forever Hold Your Banner High, by Jerry Bowles, which traces the history of the Club and

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT SCHOOL TESTS

They can slow down bright kids, discourage creativity—even endanger a child's future. But now educators are doing something about the problem.

By Polly Dranov

CHOOSE THE BEST RESPONSE
IQ tests show:
a) How smart a child is
b) How well he understands English
c) What grade he should be placed in
d) All of the above
e) None of the above

Confused? It's a confusing question, one that educators have been debating for years. In fact, a rip-roaring argument is going on right now about the value of all standardized tests kids take in school—the IQ tests, the achievement tests, the aptitude tests and even the reading readiness tests. On one side are influential educators who claim the test results are not only misleading and useless to parents and teachers but also are unfair to children. On the other are state governments, local school boards and administrators who rely on tests to judge the kind of job our schools are doing.

One thing, though, everyone agrees on—the scores kids get on these tests have a tremendous impact on their schooling. Take the case of Jerry, a restless nine-year-old who was doing pretty well in school until he took an IQ test in fourth grade. His score was low, much lower than his schoolwork indicated it should be. Jerry's teacher was a little surprised—she knew he often had a hard time sitting still in the classroom, but his work was pretty good.

Jerry never knew the results of the test, but he did sense that his teachers expected less of him, and in the fifth grade his marks began to slip. They went even lower in the sixth grade. By the time he was 16, Jerry had dropped out of school. Then, a few years later, he met a girl who didn't want to marry a high-school dropout. She convinced him to finish at night school, where he was required to take another IQ test. Somehow, his "intelligence" had miraculously jumped about 20 points. Jerry was not "slow" and never had been.

Why did he score so low on that fourth-grade IQ test? There could be dozens of reasons. Maybe he was coming down with a cold. Maybe he was more restless than usual that day. Maybe he misunderstood the instructions and lingered over a tough question instead of moving on to the next one.

Luckily, Jerry got a second chance. But thousands of others aren't that lucky, and more and more educators are protesting that standardized tests are unfair to all children. Jerrold R. Zacharias, a physics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is passionate on the subject. "Our efforts to measure so-called intelligence have had an imprisoning and destructive effect on the lives of children. In fact, I believe the entire enterprise of standardized machine-scored aptitude and achievement tests has been grossly misused," he wrote in a professional journal for elementary school principals. Says Bernard McKenna of the National Education Association (N.E.A.): "These tests take time and cost money. They're frustrating to the kids and most of them simply aren't very useful."

In particular, IQ tests serve no useful purpose, say Dr. McKenna, Dr. Zacharias and many other educators, if only because no one has ever defined intelligence. "The best research on intelligence tells us that there are between 50 and 100 different types. IQ tests get at two or three—verbal and mathematical reasoning and the ability to recall. They're really low-level achievement tests," says McKenna.

Other problems, the N.E.A. feels, are that some of the standardized tests kids take in the public schools "are either invalid and unreliable or out of date or unfair. They should be withdrawn from use." The group is against using test results as a basis for allocation of Federal, state or local funds or for judging student progress.

Here's one example of what the N.E.A. is talking about. All tests have to be constructed so that they can be graded by a computer. That means there can only be one "right" or "best" answer. But often none of the choices is precisely right, so the student is left to figure out what is best. This confuses a lot of youngsters—particularly the bright ones who know that none of the answers really fits. The kids who do best, therefore, are the ones who guess what the tester wants.

The tests also penalize children who don't work fast, who don't work well under pressure and who are puzzled by questions that are ambiguous, meaningless, misleading or simply irrelevant to anything they know or care about. In fact, Jerrold Zacharias contends that the test makers themselves are often ignorant about the subject matter and unclear about what they want the tests to disclose.

Furthermore, testing profoundly affects the entire educational process. Educators are especially appalled at the increasing practice of releasing test scores to the press. The argument in favor of this trend is that the public has a right to know how well the schools are doing their jobs. Everyone agrees that a need exists for school evaluation, but educators don't think standardized tests are the best way to go about it, particularly with the tests currently in use. They also point out that, for this and other reasons, teachers find themselves "teaching to the tests" in an effort to boost the scores of their students—even though they often don't believe that the tests have any relevance. And published scores can mislead parents into panicking at the thought that their kids aren't very bright or are enrolled in a school where achievement levels are lower than at other schools in the district, the state or even the whole country.

Worst of all, of course, is the effect on the youngsters themselves. The stigma of a low test score—both for classmates and teachers—is hard to shake, as witnessed by Jerry's experience. His was a case of a "self-fulfilling prophecy," which means that everyone accepted the judgment of the test; Jerry wasn't expected to do well on the basis of that score, and, so, without encouragement at home or at school, he began doing poorly.

Fortunately for us—and our children—educators are working on ways to cope with the problem. For instance, figuring that every child will be subjected to at least six full batteries of standardized tests during a public-school education, two of Dr. Zacharias' colleagues at MIT have come up with what they call a "due process" procedure. It would require principals to send a note to parents describing the test, explaining who will take it, who is expected to benefit and how, what the results will be used for, whether or not a student's name will be known by those studying the results, whether or not the score will become part of the child's permanent record, the consequences of not taking the test and any description of the report that will be made to the parent AND child on the basis of the results. Thus informed, parents could refuse to permit their children to take the test if they saw fit.

That kind of procedure could enlighten parents about what kinds of tests their youngsters take and why. Even so, parents have to be on guard against taking the results too seriously. Essentially, we've got to keep in mind that the tests, at best, are an imprecise measure of a child's abilities and, at worst, are downright misleading and unfair. Both teachers and parents must be alert to the fact that their impressions of a child's talents and abilities are far more reliable than any computer.

Walter Lippmann summed it all up way back in 1920: "If the impression takes root that these tests really measure intelligence, that they constitute a sort of last judgment on the child's capacity, that they reveal 'scientifically' his predestined ability, then it would be a thousand times better if all the intelligence testers and all their questionnaires were sunk without warning in the Sargasso Sea."

Final Net vs. Aerosols: a head-on comparison

In the first place, (1) Final Net is not an aerosol. There's no wasteful propellant mixed in. Final Net gives you concentrated power, for a really great long-lasting hold. (2) Final Net holds your hair in any weather without leaving it tacky. (3) Final Net spritzes exactly where you want it—no need to spray and spray in hopes of hitting the right place. (4) If aerosol hairsprays bother you here, Final Net won't. You'll find (5) in your pocketbook, because 8 ounces of Final Net go as far as 24 ounces of aerosol hairspray. (With aerosols, you're paying for a lot of propellant.) Final Net over aerosols. Really, there's no comparison.

JANE PAULEY: AT 26 SHE'S FOUND ROOM AT THE TOP

In 4 short years she has gone from college senior at Indiana University to co-host of America's Number 1 morning show.

Judy Gurovitz

Her new apartment has a spectacular view: "I want to see all of the city."

By Anita Summer

Jane Pauley. Only a few months ago the name meant nothing to us. But now there she is, every morning on the Today show, wedged in between Tom Brokaw and Gene Shalit.

Outwardly, she's easy enough to describe—a 26-year-old, 5'4" willowy blonde with a flawless complexion wearing a crew neck sweater, loose jacket, flared skirt and high-heeled boots in shades of brown—but how did she get where she is, and what's she like inside?

"Well," she says, "to begin with, I was born in Indianapolis. My father wasn't rich, but we never went without, either." She was raised by church-going parents who were not disciples of permissiveness: "I had to say where I was going, why, with whom, proposed time of arrival and precise moment of departure." She shared her home with cats, dogs, parakeets, goldfish and her older sister Ann, once her nemesis and idol, now her best friend.

At 15, Jane became involved with the N.F.L. (The National Forensic League, the debating, not the sports, organization.) She spoke extemporaneously for her team, wrote speeches on current events and began her love affair with politics and people in the public eye.

Jane graduated from Indiana University in 1972 with a degree in political science. She soon joined WISH-TV in Indianapolis as a reporter. Now, in a few short years, she's come a long way—both geographically and financially: NBC refuses to comment, but reports say Jane is earning from $70,000 to $100,000 a year.

When NBC called her to New York City last summer, Jane was unaware she was one of a hundred people on NBC's list of possible replacements for Barbara Walters. But on July 30th and August 2nd she tried out for Today. Then the five finalists—Betty Furness, Catherine Mackin, Linda Ellerbee, Betty Rollin and Jane Pauley—were each brought back for another week. It was no contest. NBC's screening committee agreed unanimously that Jane was the person. Said Richard Fisher, vice president of TV News: "She stood out as the one most popular with viewers. She was like a shining star."

But, then, everyone who has been associated with her says she is special. She's been defined as "hard working," "no ego," "serious but warm," "dedicated" and "highly articulate." Perhaps her ex-boss, Lee Giles, of WISH-TV puts it best: "On TV she blossoms. She just has that special quality not many people in this business have. You can't define it, it's just there."

Now, though exuding confidence and

What do you say to a four-ton elephant? You say "Abracadabra!" and it disappears—if you happen to be Doug Henning. His second Mobil Showcase presentation will be telecast live on NBC December 23. In addition to disposing of his ponderous friend, the magical Mr. Henning will mystify one and all with his "organic" illusions (involving fire, water or air). As a climax (after he's really warmed up) Henning will escape from a flaming box. "Doug Henning's World of Magic" starts at 8 p.m. on the East Coast. For other areas, check your local TV listings. Watch closely!

o

Peaceful coexistence. How do sport fish and offshore oil wells get along? Swimmingly, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service. Citing experience in the Gulf of Mexico, the Service points out that platforms act as artificial reefs, providing shelter for the small organisms little fish feed on. The little fish, in turn, attract such species as grouper, red snapper, and king mackerel, much to the delight of Gulf anglers. So next time someone hassles you about those offshore platforms, just ask him if he's checked with a fish lately.

The more things change . . . . A magazine editorial headlined "Government Acts Make Oil Crisis Worse Than Ever" described a "growing emergency," and "new threats to the oil supply in the Middle East." It made the point that the government ought to help, not obstruct, efforts to drill for domestic oil offshore. Where did the editorial appear? In the Saturday Evening Post. When? On May 26, 1951, when the U.S. imported 844,000 barrels of oil a day, about one-eighth of today's 6.7-million-barrel-a-day import level. Enough said.

Squeeze play. That's what the oil industry was caught in last year. A recent Chase Manhattan Bank analysis shows that, while worldwide net income for the 29 companies selected for the study fell 30 percent in 1975 (to $11.5 billion), capital and exploration outlays grew 9.5 percent (to a record $26.6 billion). Like so many people, these oil companies were earning less and spending more. So far in 1976, an analysis of selected major oil companies indicates that earnings have improved, but expenditures are also up.

JANE PAULEY

Continued

Judy Gurovitz

poise, she frowns and says, "My nightmare—one that comes back with disturbing regularity—is that I will find myself on the set, totally unprepared, with a mystery guest, holding a script containing gibberish." She also says she panics when she turns off the lights at night: "That's when I agonize about being ready for the next day. Whether that means I'm secure—or naive—remains to be seen. So far," quickly tapping the nearest piece of wood, "I've managed to bypass a myriad of probable calamities—becoming blank, forgetting the guest's name, losing continuity." At the same time, being the focal point of millions of curious eyes does not faze her. "I don't look at or into a camera with fear. While I know I'm vulnerable, I've never had that awful sensation of being alone in front of all those people."

When, with bleary eyes, having just rolled out of bed, you tune in to Jane at 7:00 A.M. and see her so crisp and alert, it's hard to believe she's been up since 4:30. Was adjusting to this new early-to-bed, early-to-rise routine difficult? "No. If it's black outside, it's all the same whether you get up at 4:00 or 6:30. The hardest bit is lights out at 9:00 or 10:00." Doesn't she resent climbing between the sheets when others are out on the town? "I've never been one for socializing during the week. I stay close to home."

After Jane leaves the air at 9:00 A.M., she threads her way through the maze of 14th-floor desks and rooms housing the Today staff at 30 Rockefeller Plaza to her small office, where she plunges into stacks of newspapers, magazines, book reviews, mail and memos. "We're a small group, so we all must constantly scour magazines and papers for interesting and newsworthy people. Our suggestions are given to the producer, and his choices are turned over to a single writer or researcher who accumulates all relevant data. Then, it all comes to me, and I have to determine the thrust of the interview and prepare questions. On politicos' activities, for instance, it's essential that I'm up-to-date until the last second. On authors, I must, of course, read their books."

At 3:30, she can call it a day and go home. An hour nap and then down to homework—watching local and network news, perusing more newspapers, books and magazines. ("Wish I read quicker," she sighs. "Life would be simpler.") Sometimes she'll have dinner with a friend and then return to her apartment on New York's East Side for more TV viewing, reading and writing before going to bed.

Her weaknesses? Splurging on lavish Christmas presents and weekend air tickets to Chicago and Pittsburgh—to visit friends and sister Ann, now a nuclear engineer—and to Indianapolis, where her parents and close friend, newspaperman Bill Shaw, live. Jane, never married or engaged, met Bill three years ago when they worked together on a murder story. "We see each other as often as distance allows. Ours is an exclusive relationship. When you find someone extraspecial, you don't want to end it."

How does Jane see herself, now that fame and fortune are at her door? Stumped at first, she gives the question some thought, then replies: "I'm easygoing, impetuous, friendly and border on the haphazard. I can be funny, but I make a point of announcing when a joke is coming—I don't want it to slip by unnoticed! I have a temper, but it is lost only when I'm under pressure. I'm the world's worst cook, specializing in scrambled eggs, sandwiches and frozen chicken pot pies. I could live on chocolate and Mom's spaghetti. I'm scared of horses and crawling things, dislike the winter, enjoy walking through the woods and watching others fish. I hate housework but, once a month, late at night, turn into a human tornado and get everything clean and sparkling. I'm turned off by pretentious people, even the interesting ones."

Her hopes and ambitions? She lights a cigarette and says, wistfully: "Recognition from my peers and colleagues. I've reached the precise spot that I would have strived for, but my dream now is to arrive at the point when people will associate Today with me, Jane Pauley, not with Barbara Walters. I'm what I'd call an optimistic fatalist, and I believe events work out. Whenever my fortune seems bad, something falls out of heaven on me. Thankfully, I haven't had too many fallouts; I've truly been blessed most of my life."

GIFTS FROM THE KITCHEN

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

Here is our annual treasury of treats to make and to give to special friends. You're sure to find a dish in our collection that will be in just the right "taste." And all of them are easy to make!

By Marilyn Hansen

FRUITED BRAN BREAD

- 1 cup finely chopped dried apricots
- 1 cup golden raisins
- ¾ cup boiling water
- ⅓ cup margarine
- ¼ cup sugar
- ½ cup dark corn syrup
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 medium-ripe banana, mashed (about 1/3 cup)
- 1 cup whole bran cereal
- ¼ cup buttermilk
- 1½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt

1. Remove labels from 5 empty (10¾ ozs. each) soup cans. Grease inside of each can.
2. In small bowl, stir together apricots and raisins. Pour boiling water over fruit mixture; soak for 30 minutes.
3. In large bowl of electric mixer, beat margarine and sugar at low speed until well blended.
4. Stir in corn syrup, then eggs. Add banana, beating until smooth.
5. In small bowl, stir together cereal and buttermilk. Stir together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Gradually add to low-speed mixer until well mixed.
6. Add cereal mixture, then fruit mixture, stirring until well mixed.
7. Turn batter into soup cans, using 1 generous cup of batter per can.
8. Bake in preheated 350° F. oven for 45 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean.

Dormouse Dollhouse Ridgewood, NJ Bill Margerin

Miniatures are "in" this Christmas from country-style doll houses to gifts from your kitchen. Try our Sesame Crunch, Hunan Glazed Pecans, Mixed Nut Crunch, Frozen Cranberry Orange Relish, Fruit Dressing, Bar-B-Que Sauce, Cranberry Leather, Lemon Bread and Fruited Bran Bread.

SESAME CRUNCH

- 2 cups sesame seeds
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- ⅓ cup water
- 2 tablespoons margarine

1. Grease 15½ x 10½ x 1-inch jelly roll pan.
2. In 3-qt. saucepan, stir together sesame seed, sugar, corn syrup, water and margarine. Bring to boil over medium heat, stirring constantly.
3. Continue cooking, without stirring, until temperature reaches 270° F. on candy thermometer or until a small amount of mixture dropped into very cold water forms a ball which is hard enough to hold its shape, yet plastic.
4. Turn onto prepared cookie sheet and spread with greased metal spatula or greased wooden spoon to ¼-inch thickness.
5. Score with sharp knife into 1½ x ½-inch pieces. Let cool completely.
6. Break apart by placing knife in scores and tapping gently with spoon.

Makes 1¾ lbs. or 175 (1½ x ½ x ¼-inch) pieces

CRANBERRY LEATHER

- 2 lbs. cranberries, washed and stems removed
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1½ cups light corn syrup
- Granulated sugar

1. In 3-qt. saucepan, place cranberries and water.
2. Cook, covered, until berries begin to pop. Add corn syrup and cook for 20 minutes.
3. Put fruit through food mill to remove skins and seeds.
4. Return mixture to saucepan, simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

5. Line 3 (15½ x 10⅛ x 1 inch) jelly-roll or similar-size pans with plastic wrap, letting it extend up the sides of the pans.
6. Divide fruit mixture equally among pans. With rubber scraper or spatula, spread mixture evenly about ¼-inch thick.
7. Place pans in warm, dry place and let dry 2 or 3 days or until "leather" is easily removed from plastic wrap.
8. With scissors, cut sheet into quarters. Dip in granulated sugar for a frosty effect, if you like. Roll up; wrap securely with plastic wrap or waxed paper and seal ends with plastic tie or small rubber bands. Store in refrigerator up to 3 months or in freezer up to 6 months. Makes 12 rolls

MIXED NUT CRUNCH

4 qts. freshly popped corn
2 cups dry roasted mixed nuts
1¼ cups sugar
⅔ cup margarine
⅔ cup dark corn syrup
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
½ teaspoon baking soda

1. Preheat oven to 250° F.
2. In large, shallow roasting pan or two 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking pans, spread popcorn and nuts.
3. In heavy 1½-qt. saucepan, stir together sugar, margarine and corn syrup.
4. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture boils. Continue cooking for 5 minutes without stirring.
5. Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla and baking soda. Pour syrup mixture over popcorn and nuts. Stir to coat.
6. Bake, uncovered, in 250° F. oven, stirring occasionally, for 1 hour. Cool; break apart. Store in tightly covered container. Makes 1 pound

LEMON BREAD

½ cup margarine
2 eggs
2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup water
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
4 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans
¼ cup light corn syrup

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. Grease a 9 x 5 x 3-inch pan.*
2. In large bowl of electric mixer, beat sugar and margarine until well blended and fluffy. Beat in eggs.
3. Stir in flour, baking powder and salt, until well mixed. Add water, lemon rind and 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice; stir in nuts. Turn batter into prepared pan.
4. Bake for 50 minutes. Stir together corn syrup and remaining 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice. Pour over loaf.
5. Return to oven and continue baking for 5 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean.
6. Cool 10 minutes before removing from pan. Let loaf stand overnight for easier slicing. Makes 1 loaf

*For Little Lemon Loaves grease three 5½ x 3 x 2-inch loaf pans. Divide batter evenly among pans. Bake at 350° F. for 40 minutes; spoon 2 tablespoons lemon syrup over each loaf and continue baking for 5 minutes. Makes 3 small loaves

Two tasty, miniature breads: Fruited Bran Bread and Lemon Bread ready for holiday gift-giving.

Three last-minute easy-to-do kitchen gifts might be Bar-B-Que Sauce, Fruit Dressing or Cranberry Orange Relish.

HUNAN GLAZED PECANS

2¼ cups water
1 cup pecan halves
¾ cup light corn syrup
2 cups corn oil

1. In small saucepan, bring 2 cups of water to a boil. Add pecans. Reduce heat; simmer 10 minutes. Drain.
2. Return pecans to saucepan; add corn syrup and remaining ¼ cup water.
3. Simmer over medium heat until mixture reaches 210° F. on candy thermometer or until syrup spins a fine thread when dropped from spoon.
4. Remove pecans to plate with a slotted spoon, not allowing sides to touch. Cool about ½ hour.
5. In a heavy, sturdy 2-qt. saucepan, heat corn oil over medium heat to 300° F. Carefully drop pecans into oil. Fry until temperature reaches 345° F. on thermometer or until few bubbles remain on the surface of the oil.
6. Remove pecans to platter. When cool, drain on paper towels, then store in tightly covered jars. Makes 1 cup

FROZEN CRANBERRY ORANGE RELISH

1 lb. cranberries, washed; stems removed (about 3 cups)
1 large orange, quartered, seeded
2 small lemons, quartered, seeded
1 cup sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
Canned peach or pear halves, drained

1. Put cranberries, orange and lemons through fine blade of food chopper or in blender container, blending at medium speed until fruit is finely chopped.
2. In large bowl, stir together finely chopped fruit, sugar and corn syrup until sugar is dissolved.
3. Turn mixture into suitable freezer container or 8 x 8 x 2-inch baking dish.
4. Freeze about 1 hour or until it is mushy. Spoon into peach or pear halves and serve as relish with roast or other meats. Makes 4 cups

Editor's note: If made ahead, store relish in 2 (1 pint each) freezer containers or jars, leaving ½-inch head space. Store in freezer. Refrigerate until ready to use.

BAR-B-QUE SAUCE

2 cans (8-oz. size) tomato sauce
½ cup dark corn syrup
⅓ cup vinegar
¼ cup minced onion
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce

1. In saucepan, combine tomato sauce, corn syrup, vinegar, onion, mustard, Worcestershire and hot pepper sauce.
2. Bring to boil; boil 2 minutes. Pour hot sauce into sterilized jars and seal.
3. Use as a barbecue basting sauce. Also good to pour over meat in roasting pan the last ½ hour of roasting. Delicious with roast beef slices, spareribs, pork chops, veal and chicken. Makes 3 cups

VERSATILE SALAD DRESSING

½ cup light corn syrup
2 teaspoons corn starch
¼ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons paprika
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons celery seed
¾ cup corn oil

1. In medium saucepan, stir together corn syrup and corn starch; add vinegar and orange juice.
2. Bring to boil over medium

Season's Eatings!

(You can make them with Best Foods® Real Mayonnaise.)

◀ STUFFED FRENCH BREAD

1 (20-inch) loaf French bread, cut in 4 pieces
1/2 cup BEST FOODS Real Mayonnaise
1/2 cup chopped parsley
2 packages (8 oz each) cream cheese, softened
1 package (0.6 oz) Italian salad dressing mix
1 jar (4 oz) pimiento, drained and chopped

Hollow out bread pieces, leaving 1/2-inch thick wall. Spread interior with 1/4 cup of the Real Mayonnaise; sprinkle with 1/4 cup of the chopped parsley. Combine remaining ingredients; pack mixture into bread. Wrap in plastic film; chill several hours. Cut into 1/2-inch slices.

◀ STUFFED CHERRY TOMATOES

1/2 cup chopped radish
2 tablespoons chopped toasted almonds
2 tablespoons BEST FOODS Real Mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon grated onion
24 cherry tomatoes, scooped out and drained

Combine first 5 ingredients; spoon into tomatoes. Chill. Makes 24 appetizers.

▲ GUACAMOLE DIP

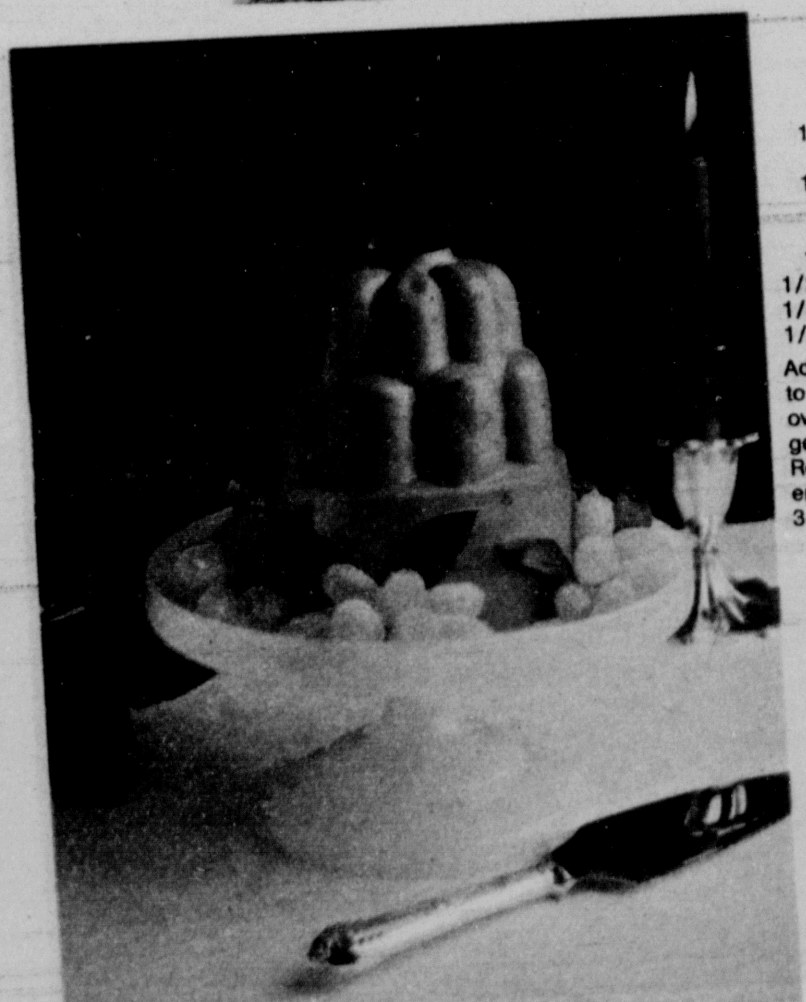
1 cup mashed avocado
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1/4 cup BEST FOODS Real Mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped green chilies
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 small tomato, finely chopped and drained

Combine all ingredients. Cover; chill 1 hour. Serve with sliced raw vegetables and corn chips. Makes 2 cups.

▲ ZIPPY ONION DIP

1 cup BEST FOODS Real Mayonnaise
1/4 cup chopped green onion
2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped ripe olive
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 small clove garlic, crushed

Combine all ingredients. Cover; chill 1 hour. Serve with sliced raw vegetables and crackers. Makes 1 1/3 cups.



◀ HOLIDAY MELBA DESSERT

1 can (8 oz) sliced peaches, drained and diced (reserve syrup)
1 package (10 oz) frozen raspberries, thawed, crushed and strained (reserve syrup)
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/4 cup BEST FOODS Real Mayonnaise
1/2 cup chopped nuts

Add enough peach syrup to raspberry syrup to measure 1 1/4 cups. Sprinkle gelatin over syrup; heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved. Beat in cream and Real Mayonnaise; chill until slightly thickened. Fold in peaches and nuts. Turn into 3-cup mold. Chill until set.

heat, stirring constantly; boil 1 minute. Remove from heat.

3. Stir in paprika, salt and celery seed. Add corn oil, ¼ cup at a time, beating well with a wire whip or rotary beater. Or whirl in blender, adding corn oil gradually. Chill.

4. Excellent with a fruit or mixed green salad.

Makes 1½ cups

Editor's note: For gift-giving, quadruple each ingredient to make 6 cups.

Box of chocolatey Stir 'n' Spoon Fudge Drops.

STIR 'N' SPOON FUDGE DROPS

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1⅔ cups sugar
⅔ cup undiluted evaporated milk
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups (4 ozs.) miniature marshmallows
1½ cups (1½ 6-oz. pkgs.) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts
½ cup raisins
½ cup finely chopped candied pineapple or dried apricots

1. Combine butter, evaporated milk, sugar and salt in saucepan over medium heat. Bring to boil. Cook 4 or 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Start timing when mixture starts to bubble around edges of pan.

2. Remove from heat. Add marshmallows, chocolate, vanilla, walnuts, raisins and candied pineapple. Stir vigorously 1 minute (until marshmallows melt and blend).

3. Working quickly, drop by teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper. Cool. Makes about 2 pounds

INDIAN CURRIED CHEESE BALL

1 pkg. (8 ozs.) cream cheese, softened
1 cup finely chopped cooked chicken or turkey
¾ cup finely chopped toasted almonds
⅓ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped chutney
1 tablespoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Flaked coconut or chopped parsley
Assorted crackers

1. In medium bowl, stir together cheese, chicken, almonds, mayonnaise, chutney, curry powder and salt. Chill several hours; shape mound into large ball.

2. Roll in flaked coconut or chopped parsley. For a holiday touch, stick a sprig of holly in the center.

3. For gift-giving, wrap with plastic film and tie with ribbon; set on top of a box of crackers that you have wrapped in foil. Tie all together with ribbon. Makes 2½-cup cheese ball

ALMOND BROWNIES

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup flour
1 cup chopped almonds

Melt chocolate, set aside. Cream butter and sugar, then beat in eggs. Blend in chocolate, vanilla and flour. Add ½ of almonds to batter, spread into greased 8" square pan. Sprinkle with remaining almonds. Bake in 325 degrees F (slow) oven, 30-35 minutes. Cool before cutting. Makes 16 brownies, 2" square.

FRUIT AND MOLASSES STOLLEN

¼ cup warm water (105-115° F.)
½ cup warm milk (105-115° F.)
2 envelopes active dry yeast
1 teaspooon salt
¼ cup sugar
1 cup sour cream
3 egg yolks
1½ cups soft butter or margarine
½ cup dark molasses
5½-6 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
½ cup slivered almonds
2 cups dark raisins
1 cup chopped mixed candied fruit
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
1½-2 tablespoons lemon juice
Additional candied fruits and almonds garnish, optional

1. In large bowl, combine water and milk. Sprinkle yeast over surface and stir until dissolved. Stir in salt, sugar, sour cream, egg yolks, butter and molasses.

2. Beat until blended although butter will still be in small lumps.

3. Stir in almonds, raisins, fruit and 4½ cups of the flour. Beat until smooth; cover. Chill dough for 2 hours or overnight.

4. Turn dough out onto a well-floured surface. Then knead, working in enough flour to form a stiff, smooth dough.

5. Cut dough in half. Roll out each piece to 14" x 8" oval. Fold ovals in half lengthwise, and place each one on a greased cookie sheet. Let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk.

6. Bake in a preheated 350° F. oven for 30 to 40 minutes or until browned. Remove to wire rack.

7. To glaze: combine confectioners' sugar and lemon juice smoothly and drizzle over each stollen while warm. Make decorative flowers with fruits and almonds if desired, or simply sprinkle with a little candied fruit. Makes 2 stollen

Editor's note: Wrap extra stollen in plastic film or foil and store in cool, dry place. Or wrap and give as a gift. May be frozen. Frost and decorate after freezing.

THE BASICS OF ACHES AND PAINS

From backache to earache to headache to sore throat...here's how they happen—with some practical advice on how to get rid of them fast.

By Neal Ashby

Sore throat, backache, stomachache, stiff neck—just a few of the aches and pains we all get at one time or another. But why do we get them? What's the fastest, safest way to get rid of them?

To get some answers, we talked with two experts—Dr. Arthur E. Lindner, Associate Dean, New York University School of Medicine, and Dr. Richard M. Stark, director of orthopedic surgery at North Shore University Hospital in Manhasset, N.Y. But remember—although these aches and pains usually will respond to the treatments described below, if they last more than two or three days, they could be symptoms of a more serious problem. In that case, see your doctor as soon as possible.

Backache. The standard one can be caused by a tightening of lower back muscles from lack of stretching, by inactivity (after prolonged sitting or driving) or by strenuous, unaccustomed use (starting an exercise program, for instance). "Moist heat will make a backache feel better, but more important is rest, with knees and waist bent, to relieve pressure on disks, vertebrae, ligaments and muscles of the back," Dr. Stark says.

Constipation. The trigger for this is usually postponing bowel movements for convenience's sake or failing to eat a balanced diet. As a result, waste gets blocked in the intestines, while the liquids needed to help it along may pass through on their own or become absorbed. The waste then grows hard. The objective of any remedy is to get the elimination system working again. "I prefer adding bulk to the diet, rather than the taking of a laxative," says Dr. Lindner. "Eat whole-grain cereals, raw fruits and vegetables—foods that are not easily digested and thus create pressure to be eliminated." Consumption of water, milk, juices and salad oils to help keep the intestines lubricated is also a good idea.

Diarrhea. This is a form of cramps or involuntary contraction of the intestines that robs us of full bowel control. An invasion of bacteria, which disturbs and speeds up normal functioning and irritates nerves, is a frequent cause. Diarrhea often strikes when we visit distant places having different strains of bacteria against which our bodies have no defenses. Away or at home, a nonprescription medicine containing kaolin-pectin generally will put a stop to it.

Earache. Most commonly due to infection and to the scratching of the delicate ear canal while cleaning out accumulated wax. Either way, swelling follows, and the accompanying pressure irritates nerves. For relief: aspirin or a heating pad.

Headache. When the muscles that encircle the outside of the skull tighten, you've got a common headache. Doctors know tension and fatigue can cause this tightening, but they nevertheless have a long way to go before understanding the process fully. So the best advice still seems to be rest and, of course, aspirin and other compounds that help reduce pain.

Heartburn. This pain near the center of the chest is created by a backup of acid from the stomach into the esophagus, where the caustic acid irritates mucous membrane. Antacids still are the quickest way to neutralize the offending acid and to make the esophagus feel better.

Muscle Pain. When one or more muscles is fatigued from overuse or cramped from being pinned down under body weight for several hours during sleep, muscle fiber swells, which irritates nerve endings. Rest or relief from pressure takes care of the problem; an icepack speeds up the reduction of swelling.

Sore Throat. Most are caused by bacterial or viral infections that irritate nerve fibers—tiny cords of sensitive tissue—in the mucous membrane of the throat. The simplest and best treatment is to gargle with soothing warm water containing crushed aspirin. This acts as a mild anesthetic.

Stiff Neck. This often occurs because of "a jarring, bumping or stretching of the neck that we may not particularly notice at the time it happens," says Dr. Stark. "A ligament may be slightly torn, and nerve fibers are telling us they don't like it. In addition, as we grow older, neck pain can be caused by a calcium spur on one of the vertebrae poking into a nerve and causing internal swelling and discomfort." Rest promotes healing, and aspirin reduces pain. Hot, wet soaks also will make a stiff neck feel better.

Stomachache. Basically, it is caused by a swelling and stretching of the intestines following the accumulation of gas. The gas is the result of swallowing too much air while eating. Moreover, some vegetables containing cellulose (such as beans) tend to produce abnormal amounts of gas. Normally, the body will eliminate excess gas. When it doesn't, old-fashioned bicarbonate of soda in water should do the trick.

JOBMANSHIP

Why You May Not Get the Praise You Deserve

"My boss never compliments me no matter how well I do my work," is one of an employee's most common complaints. Some bosses believe paying a salary signifies sufficient approval, but they're bucking human nature. Industrial psychologists have repeatedly proved people need recognition and praise. Bosses who ignore this fact cheat themselves of the extra effort and loyalty their kind words would produce. However, the way you react to praise may well affect the amount of it you receive: Are you the type of person who, when you receive a compliment, relaxes and feels you can coast for a while? Your boss may have noticed that praise has this effect on you and may react accordingly. Or, when you're complimented, do you boast to everyone about it? Your supervisor may not like the impression you're creating of being a "favorite." Finally, your expectations of praise are perhaps unreasonable. Do you wait for a rave every time you satisfactorily complete a task? You can't expect your boss to be bowled over daily by the fact you're able to do your job; that's why you have it! If you never seem to receive your fair share of recognition from a boss who does give deserved praise, one of your co-workers may be stealing credit for your accomplishments. If so, see that your supervisor finds out who contributed what.

PEOPLE AND YOU

The Labor Pains of an Expectant Father

The hysterical father-to-be in a TV or movie skit is always good for a laugh. Now it turns out the poor guy really may be in the grip of a psychological crisis. Psychiatrist Silas B. Coley Jr. and psychologist Barbara E. James of the School of Medicine, University of North Carolina, have completed a study which reveals that fathers-to-be may be undergoing "emotional and physical trauma." Almost one out of five prospective fathers may be so upset that he behaves erratically. These fathers fight with family and strangers, and they deliberately make themselves scarce during pregnancy, when they're needed to go to the hospital, and during the first demanding weeks afterwards. Their behavior may even be bizarre enough to include chronic vomiting or diarrhea during the wife's pregnancy. All new fathers, say the researchers, are under some stress because of increased responsibility, rivalry with the baby for the wife's attention, and sometimes feeling the child locks them into an unhappy marriage. An awareness of these feelings may help the prospective father to understand better his own reactions and the new mother (who certainly has enough tensions of her own!) to realize that her husband's anxieties are not unique. You can obtain a Government leaflet, So You're Going To Be A New Father, which discusses physical changes in the mother as well as attitude changes and new worries both parents may have. WHAT IN THE WORLD!

You'd better stretch your coffee break: "Let's have another cup of coffee" may be heard less frequently in the coming year. The 1977 coffee crop is estimated to be the smallest in years, says consumer marketing economist Mildred Walker of Kansas State University. The climate of Brazil usually is just right for producing the coffee beans appreciated around the world, but a severe frost in July of this year caused an immediate short supply. And coffee supplies will likely be tight for at least another two years, while trees recover from the frost damage and new trees reach production. In the meantime, look for retail prices to continue their climb.

FLYERS' RIGHTS: Delayed flights can drive you up the wall if you don't know your rights. Did you know that on some airlines you may be entitled to a free night in a hotel if your flight is delayed between the hours of 10:00 PM and 6:00 AM? And that if you are delayed four hours or more you are permitted, at the airline's expense, to make a long-distance telephone call anywhere in the continental United States? These and other airline amenities are explained in depth in a booklet put out by the Aviation Consumer Action Project. For information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: ACAP, P.O. Box 19029, Washington, D.C. 20036.

BUDDY HACKETT
The show-biz bard

Comedian Buddy Hackett is known as the "Poet Laureate of Hollywood." His first collection of poems is called, The Naked Mind of Buddy Hackett. Although his verse has been compared to Rod McKuen's, Hackett insists he has been influenced by no one. "I don't read other poets," he says. "If people read a poet, it's because they need it. My poetry is me." And it comes out just about everywhere, he says. "Sometimes I'll be walkin' along, and I get a brainstorm. Other times, I'm drivin' with my wife and a poem comes to me, and I say, 'Sherry, take this down.' I write my best things on doilies in restaurants when I'm waitin' for a sammich."

HOWARD COSELL WITH SENATORS WEICKER AND KENNEDY
Nothing but the truth

A sportscaster on his success: "I never wanted to be in sports. I was put into sports broadcasting by accident. I tried to get out of sports seven or eight years ago, but I was stigmatized by then. I should have been in news, national and international. Basically my profession does not deal with truth. It's not allowed. Sport is sanctified, at least as far as the great bulk of the sportswriters of America are concerned and also the sports announcers, because in most cases they need the approval of the owners and commissioners to be hired. But that has never applied to me, and in my case I had the luck of timing. There's no question that I came along when the young people of this society were growing up far differently from my generation, and they had a sense of life and what was happening. They had the horrible unending war in Southeast Asia. They had the narcotics addiction problems. They had the racial anguish to deal with. They were circumscribed everywhere by reality, so they weren't disposed to the notion that sport is Camelot. And I told the truth about sport, and I think the timing was right for me, especially in the age of Richard Nixon." From The Success Trip, by Ross Firestone (Playboy Press, $10.95).

Japan's astonishing low crime rate: Japan is an affluent, mobile, congested and technically innovative country. It has all the attributes Americans consider modern. Yet, unlike most other modern cities, those in Japan have a crime rate that is low—and declining. This might be due to the low-key posture of the Japanese police. They believe a lesson in good behavior is of far more value than a fine. Instead of issuing a parking ticket, they will often have the offender send a formal letter of apology to the chief of the local police station. The kobans, small police stations, serve as bases for patrolling officers. When an officer is out on patrol, he makes a special point of talking to people about themselves and their behavior. If the policeman feels more investigation is called for, he is usually quite adept at getting people to agree to come to the koban for further, less public, conversation. National contests give recognition to officers who are best at on-street interrogation. The kobans are all-purpose sources of help. A mother might come in and ask for water for her baby's bottle. Some kobans issue cards which are prized by children. If a child finds a coin someone has dropped and turns it in, kobans give a printed card filled in with the child's name, the date and the particular deed performed.

Ups, downs and gallstones: Overweight people are more subject to gallstones than normal-weight persons, but recent research reported by the National Institutes of Health shows that the overweights who reduce, re-gain and reduce again are the most susceptible of all to gallstone attacks. The reason: gallstones seem to form when the liver secretes bile that is supersaturated with cholesterol. Obese people's bile carries more cholesterol than that of thin people. During weight reduction, the cholesterol content of the bile is also high. When weight is reduced and stabilized, the cholesterol drops. People with a "Yo-Yo" weight pattern may be staying in a gallstone-forming condition a great deal of the time.

AT THE END
Champagne, anyone?

At the end—the very end—of their lives, some famous folk said some mighty peculiar things. And luckily someone was there to write them down: Writer and philosopher Henry David Thoreau, asked if he had made his peace with God, replied that he wasn't aware of having quarreled with Him, and then uttered two, inexplicable last words, "Moose Indian." When François Rabelais, the French writer, slipped away, he said, "I am going to the great perhaps." Writer Oscar Wilde called for champagne: "I am dying, as I have lived, beyond my means." Torlogh O'Carolan, writer, wanted a cup of Irish whisky: "It would be hard if two such friends should part at least without kissing." For the scariest last line, boxer Max Baer holds the trophy: "Oh, God, here I go!"

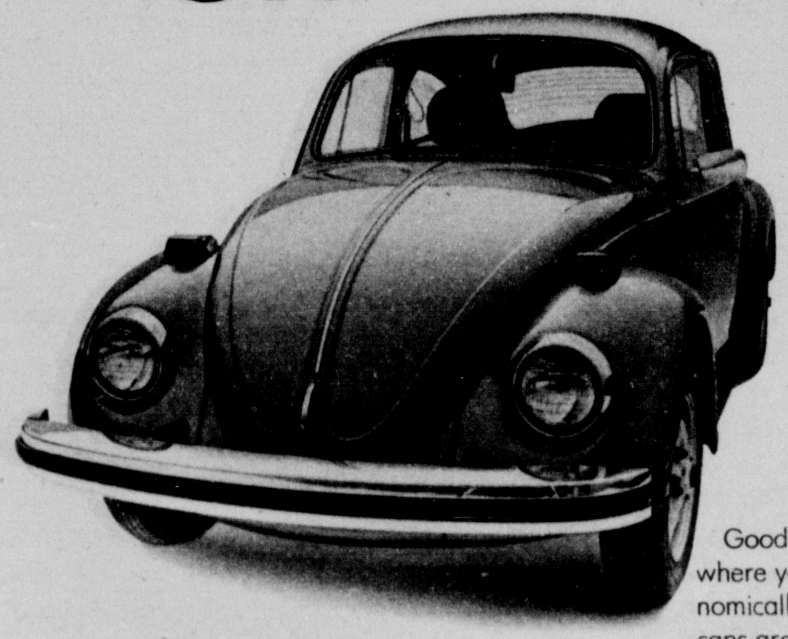
Old Faithful.



New Faithful.

Good Old Faithful. Always got you where you were going. Always did it economically. A whole generation of Americans grew up with Old Faithful. And now, 27 years and 33 million cars later, it's still a symbol of dependability and economy.

Now there's a car that's just as reliable and economical as Old Faithful ever was. It's New Faithful. The 1977 VW Rabbit. With engineering so advanced that automotive experts have hailed it as the kind of car Detroit will be building in the 1980's.

The Rabbit has a new fuel injection system, so it starts up quick as a bunny. Springs like one, too. 0 to 50 in just 7.7 seconds. The Rabbit also has advanced engineering features like negative steering roll radius to help maintain directional stability in the event of a front-tire blowout; rack-and-pinion steering for more direct maneuvering and better road feel; and an independent stabilizer rear axle, low in unsprung weight, for better road holding.

New Faithful lives up to Old Faithful's reputation for economy, too. Because it has fuel injection, you can use the most economical grade of gas.* But you won't have to use it very often. Rabbit gets 37 mpg on the highway, 24 in the city. (That's EPA's estimate for manual transmission. Actual mileage may vary, depending on driving habits, car's condition and optional equipment.)

Dependability and economy. That's what Old Faithful gave a whole generation of Americans. And that's what New Faithful is giving a whole new generation of Americans.

New Faithful. The 1977 VW Rabbit.
